1. LULU: "Charley, will you please carry this tray of glasses into the dining room for me? No, Leander, I will NOT allow you to do it. You break nearly everything you lay your hands on. Charley is so careful."
LEANDER (aside): "Ye gods! That chump shall pay for this."

2. CHARLEY ONTHESPOT: "Yes, Lulu, it is a pleasure to wait on you."
LULU: "Thank you for saying so, Charley. Those glasses are too valuable to trust Leander with."
LEANDER (aside): "Ye gods! Just listen to THAT! I hope he trips! I hope he trips! I hope he trips!"

3. CHARLEY: "W-e-o-w!"
LULU: "Oh, Charley, what have you done? Who left that hassock in Charley's way?"
LEANDER: "W-e-o-o-o-p! There he goes! SMASH! Oh, he is SO careful! Ha! ha! ha!"

4. LULU: "Oh, my beautiful cut glass! Oh, Charley!"
LEANDER: "Oh, my stars, SUCH a smash! Oh, he is SO careful! Couldn't trust ME with them! Oh, ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho, ho! Such a joke! Oh, I win out every week now."

5. LULU: "Why, LEANDER, what do you mean by laughing at Charley's misfortune? I am ashamed of you. Get up, Charley. Never mind, it wasn't your fault. I don't care for the glasses anyhow. Oh, dear me! You poor boy, you have scratched you poor finger. Poor, poor fellow."

6. LULU: "Now, there, that arnica will make it all well. Let me bandage it a little tighter. Poor Charley! Yes, you had better hide your face, Leander. The idea of you laughing at Charley's mishap. I am ashamed of you. Don't speak to me again this evening."
LEANDER: "x x x!!——x x!!"

What a Gaiety Girl Did.

How Rosie Boote, Skirt Dancer, Won the Respect and Gratitude of All Fashionable England by Marrying and Reforming the Scapegrace Marquis of Headfort—and Has Now Made English Titled Society Glad to Welcome Four More Gaiety Girls.

ONCE A GAIETY GIRL—NOW THE DIGNIFIED MARCHIONESS OF HEADFORT.

MARIE STUDHOLME WHO WILL MARRY LORD BRACKLEY.

MAUDIE DARRELL WHO WILL MARRY LORD GERARD.

THE MARQUIS OF HEADFORT.

THE SOUBRETTE BRIDE OF HON. HARCOURT POWELL

LONDON, January 17.

THE recent announcement that four new peeresses are about to be admitted to English fashionable titled society from the ranks of the Gaiety Theatre dancers has caused little commotion—and the reason is extremely interesting. Society has watched with amazement the career of little Rosie Boote, Gaiety skirt dancer, who married the scapegrace young Marquis of Headfort a few years ago. Instead of scandalizing the great ladies of title, this young woman has reformed the little rake she married and has won the respect and admiration of everybody.

Rosie Boote, having developed into a paragon of all the domestic virtues, has sent the Gaiety Girl's stock up to a really respectable percentage in the estimation of the titled mammas and papas of titled and unmanageable marriageable sons.

The parents of wealthy young Hon. Harcourt Powell have received with equanimity the news that he has married a Gaiety Girl. The multi-millionaire Earl of Ellesmere is preparing to congratulate his eldest son, Viscount Brackley, when he announces that he has won the lovely Marie Studholme. And the popular Lord Gerard is openly wooing Maude Darrell, the Drury Lane favorite, sure that she will be welcome at Eastwell Park, where the King was his mother's guest only a few weeks since. And the announcement of still another new peeress from the footlights is expected in a few weeks.

No more weeping and wailing and wringing of hands over the charms of Nora Whallen's tripping toes, or the dazzling graceful manipulations of Madge Ellis's skirts, or the dainty confusion of exquisite Marie Studholme's golden locks.

The titled mammas of titled sons gaze upon them smilingly from the stalls.

"Look at the young Marchioness of Headfort," they say. (Of course, they have forgotten the name of Rosie Boote!) "See what she has made of the Marquis of Headfort! How can any one be so foolish as to object to a Gaiety Girl? She is the salt of the earth!"

Things were different, some three years ago, when Rosie Boote and the Marquis defied opposition and announced their marriage. All England from the King down to the colonel of the young Marquis's regiment cried out in horror.

It was called shameful, disgraceful, and everything that high power could do was brought to bear against it. The Marquis's regiment argued, his King threatened, his mother pleaded, his father commanded—and the marriage took place.

"Well, it's all over with Headfort," said every-

"HOW TO BE A BEAUTY LIKE ME"

---By Mlle. Liane de Pougy, the Famous French Beauty.

BE SURE YOU ALWAYS MIX YOUR OWN BEAUTY LOTIONS.
ALWAYS FASTEN THE FIRST BUTTON OF YOUR GLOVE LAST.
A VASELINED THREAD TO REMOVE A BLISTER.
USE WAX TO RESTORE A LOST FINGER NAIL.
TRIM YOUR EYELASHES TO MAKE THEM THICK AND LONG.

NO woman who expects to be considered even fairly good looking will ever permit her skin to be invaded by the disfiguring pimple. No sacrifice is considered too much to banish these red spots.

First, then, let her look to her menus. Let her be sure that her food is well digested and that she eats only food that is easily digested. Let her beware of stimulants, of anything that heats or excites the blood.

But there is no woman in the world who has not, at one time or another, been afflicted with a pimple somewhere. Now there are many and various cures, all of which you may try for yourself, because none of them is dangerous.

If the pimples are not very bad try washing them every morning with very hot water and ichthyol soap.

If the pimples are really very persistent you should have some internal remedy from your physician, and at the same time try one of the following lotions or pomades. Here are five. .

Distilled water	30 grams
Tar	20 grams
Tincture of benzoin	2 grams

Apply this gently at night and do not wash it off in the morning.

Carbonate of potash	0.25 centigre
Distilled thyme water	75 grams

Use this hot.

Sulphuric ether	5 grams
Spirits of rosemary	10 grams
Essence of fennel	4 drop
Cherry laurel water	30 grams

Apply gently at night and leave it on until morning.

Magistery of sulphur	12 grams
Sublimate of sulphur	8 grams
Rectified alcohol	20 grams
Distilled rose water	16 grams
Tragacanth	6 grams

Apply this night and morning.

This is a very strong mixture; in fact, a very radical remedy for an acute attack of acne.

Powder of boric acid	60 grams
Magistery of sulphur	10 grams
Distilled cherry laurel water	40 grams
Gum arabic	12 grams

This remedy is less strong and might be tried first. If it does not succeed try the other one.

If the pimples spread into raised red blotches treat them very tenderly. Don't use any cold water and don't take any stimulants. Protect your skin with rice powder when you go out and wear a thick veil. Steam baths are excellent when the spots are in this condition.

But scarification is really the most efficacious cure. Heat a fine needle to white heat and pierce each spot with it. The pain will last only a second.

When your face is covered with these red blotches, it is well to try washing it with:

Distilled water	200 grams
Alcohol	15 grams
Sublimated sulphur	30 grams

At night put on the spots the following pomade:

Vaseline	80 grams
Oxide of zinc	8 grams

EAT VEGETABLES ONLY.

I have spoken of food as one of the important assistants to a good complexion. What, then, should we eat? That is always the question.

One cannot lay down an absolute diet that every one can follow exactly, but it is quite certain that there are certain foods that in an immediate bad effect upon most alkins.

In the first place, never eat too much. A beautiful woman, a woman who wishes to remain beautiful, should always be on her guard against eating or drinking to quantities. Nothing quicker destroys a good skin than too much food.

Now, as to the color of the skin and the texture. Both these qualities are largely influenced by what we eat. As a general rule, to keep the skin a rosy pink, do not eat too much animal food. Live as much as possible on vegetables. Eat all the leeks and spinach that you can. So important was this sort of vegetable diet considered in the fifteenth century that it passed into a proverb that "greens would make a lily skin."

Eat carrots, cucumbers, tomatoes. They are all good for the skin. Avoid fish, particularly shell fish, which is sure to make the skin rough. Eat only a little butter, grease or lard. Avoid candies and pastries, and cheese, except gruyere, which is good.

Acids and spices are bad, also vinegar and lemon. Lemonade, fairly sweet, and milk are excellent for the skin. Tea, coffee and chocolate are not to be recommended.

Never drink your tea pure. Always dilute it with ——or, mineral water if possible. Wine coarsens the skin. Drink very little tea unless you are too fat.

The ideal drink for beauty should consist of a glass of very hot water before the principal meal.

Eat as much fruit as you can—particularly apples and oranges. Gooseberries, cherries, apricots, peaches are excellent complexion beautifiers. Grapes are also good. Strawberries are to be recommended only to some people. In all cases of eczema they are bad.

Oranges should be beauty's standby. In the time of Louis Philippe, one of the noted beauties, who at eighty-four was still young looking with a milky skin, boasted she had eaten little but oranges for forty years—twelve oranges for breakfast, twelve for lunch and ten for dinner with a bit of bread and a glass of Bordeaux.

A great many women who sacrifice themselves for their complexions have learned that a vegetable diet is essential.

Eat only three times a day if you want your skin to be beautiful. In the morning drink a glass of milk with a roll and just a little butter. At noon eat vegetables and just a little white meat, fruit and a little fragrant coffee.

Do not eat too late at night, and eat but little. Take very little fish except oysters or sole, if procurable.

The English fashion of having tea at 5 o'clock is very bad for the skin. Rest after your meals and assist digestion with nothing that taxes the mind. A little light talk is all that should follow a meal. Then walk and breathe the fresh air.

TO HAVE BEAUTIFUL FEET.

Above all things, never wear shoes that are too short. Compression will make even a well-shaped foot ugly, and an ugly foot it will make unbearable. Remember always that the models of perfect feet are to be found among the Greek and Roman statues, where the sandals leave them absolutely free.

Slippers and indolence are the two chief promoters of thick ankles. Massage and exercise the ankles. Walk and wear high button boots.

Mme. Vestris, a celebrated French beauty, was said to have made more conquests on account of her beautiful feet than on account of her face.

She made it a practice always to have her shoes of satin served on her feet, so that they would conform exactly to their shape. She wore them only once.

The feet should be washed at least once every day, preferably at night. Don't have the water too hot, merely lukewarm. While they are still moist, rub them wherever there is any thickened skin gently with pumice stone. Then dip your hand in vaseline and massage all the joints to make them supple.

After a long walk, if the feet are tired, try bathing them in a solution of linden leaves or salt water. Rub them afterward with a rough towel.

If the feet are inclined to perspire, use lycopodium powder. Always cut your toenails square, not pointed, and keep them short. If they extend beyond the flesh they are apt to rub against the boot.

For one reason or another, generally because our shoes do not fit properly, we develop corns. They should always be treated at the very beginning. At the very beginning the corn is tender, and the best treatment consists in applying to it castor oil. Wet a piece of linen with the oil and lay it on the corn. Or try a bread and vinegar poultice.

All sorts of remedies for corns are to be found everywhere. The best are made with collodion. But here are some practical recipes that you may try for yourself. To begin with the troublesome corn:

Salicylic acid	1 gram
Alcohol at 90 per cent	6 grams
Collodion	6 grams

Acetic acid ..... 15 grams
Tincture of iodine ..... 15 grams
Salicylic acid ..... 1 gram
Extract of Indian cannabis ..... 2 grams
Collodion ..... 120 grams

Paint the corn with one of these mixtures every night.

When the feet become callous, try rubbing the callous part with pumice stone and then paint it with

Salicylic acid	1 gram
Alcohol	0.50 centigrs.

To improve and strengthen the nails rub on them

Lard oil	60 grams
White wax	8 grams
Spanish white	12 grams
Carmine	5 grams
Oil of sweet almonds	5 grams

To remove a blister on the foot pass a bit of vaselined thread through it. If the blister is on the sole of your foot where the skin is thick, take a fine white thread and grease it well with boricated or pure vaseline, then thread a rubber coarse needle with it and pass it through the blister from one end to the other, mixture:

Then cut the thread on each side. Cover the spot under the stocking with a bit of muslin dipped in vaseline and the next day draw the thread out. You will find the blister gone.

One might not think that so small, so insignificant a feature of the body as the nail would play so important a part in beauty's make-up as it does.

It is really, perhaps, what makes or unmakes the hand, and it certainly has a vast deal to do with the comfort of one's foot.

We all know that a beautiful hand may be made ugly merely by biting the nails or by neglecting them so that the skin at the base becomes overgrown. Their color, their transparency, their shape are all important.

The nails grow constantly; in fact, they are renewed altogether every three months. To keep them in good condition they should be attended to every day. Now, it is not in the least necessary to have a skilled manicure to do this.

Study the shape of your fingers and file the nails to suit them. Soak the tips for a couple of minutes in tepid boric water, always avoiding very cold or very hot water. Then push the skin back gently from the base of the nails and the sides. The soap and water will soften it. Rub the care of the nails is easy to learn. Here are some recipes that are more difficult and of which many people are greatly in need.

Many fair women are troubled with brittle nails. Their nails break as soon as they grow out to any length. Now here is a splendid recipe to prevent this. Try it.

At night rub on them the following pomade, and then put on an old pair of gloves:

Oil of almonds	15 grams
White wax	2 grams
Powdered black pearls	2 grams, 6 centigrams
Pulverized alum	2 grams, 6 centigrams
White wax	5 grams

Unfortunately the lashes have a way of falling out for apparently no reason. But let me say right here that they are affected by the health, by bad circulation, nervousness, anaemia. Sometimes they need a tonic. An excellent one may be made with tepid water and a few drops of cologne. Or rub them gently with a little castor oil.

Cut your eyelashes every now and then with a steady hand if you want them to grow thick and long. Do this every three weeks. This will strengthen them. Only just the very tips with a fine, sharp pair of scissors.

When there is no inflammation or redness of the lids, and the lashes still fall out, paint them with a fine brush dipped in:

Gallic acid	1 gram
Vaseline	15 grams
Castor oil	4 grams
Essence of lavender	6 drops

Mix.

One of the great points of all toilet preparations is to have them fresh. Be your own beauty druggist, so that your lotions may always be fresh. Have your own mortar and pestle. Provide yourself with a funnel, a sieve, several small porcelain and glass jars, some silver spoons, a shade and a pair of scales.

Almost all the recipes that I have given in this article may be made at home—every one of them.

The sensible, up-to-date woman understands thoroughly every detail of her toilet. She knows the use of every toilet accessory—brushes, combs, sponges, etc.—to perfection.

There is, by the way, a right way to put on and take off gloves. If you want to preserve their shape. Put in the fourth fingers of your glove first, then the third and button the deep button last.

First of all have the hands perfectly dry, then put in first the four fingers, holding the wrist of the glove turned up by the hand, so as not to stretch it too much and leaving the thumb out. Gently push the glove over the fingers with the other hand. Then lean the elbow on the table and introduce the thumb with great care. Now turn the wrist over and button the second button of the glove, then the other.

How a Gaiety Girl Won the Gratitude of All Fashionable England.

one when he gave up his commission in the army. "He has disgraced us," sighed his brother officers. "He prefers marriage with an actress to service in South Africa!"

In three years this same Gaiety Girl has caused a revolution. She has been received by Queen Alexandra herself. In the words of the song with which she fascinated captivated audiences at the Gaiety Theatre, she has "Got there!"

The King, who joined his protest at the time of the marriage to that of the Marquise's mother, has received her inside the royal enclosure at Ascot. The young Marchioness was a guest during the whole race meeting of Lady Musgrave, a daughter of that old court favorite, Lord Suffield, and a friend of the Princess of Wales.

Then at a certain ball at Grosvenor House, one of the most exclusive balls of last season, given by the Duchess of Westminster, the Marchioness of Headfort (once Rosie Boote, the Gaiety Girl) was chronicled as among the guests.

"Dear little Marie Studholme," one hears, "wont it be delightful when she marries the Viscount Brackley! Hitherto we have been obliged to admire her only from a distance, but as the Viscount's wife we shall all have an opportunity of meeting her."

The great world of London is much excited over it because as every one knows Marie Studholme is a universal favorite. She is pretty from the crown of her gold en head to the soles of her tiny feet. She is graceful and talented, and not a bit spoiled by the applause that has been hers ever since the day she began learning nevertheless, you soon her dancer.

Night after night Lord Brackley may be seen proudly vouching his admiration in a round of applause. He is the eldest son of the Earl of Ellesmere and a great catch. He is young, good looking, athletic, a soldier and a sportsman, only thirty-two and extremely rich.

Many a mother of many a marriageable girl is sighing over him.

"But what can you expect?" the wise girl answers. And even proud, fond mammas shake their heads resignedly over the irresistible charms of the Gaiety girl.

Another of the future Lady Brackley's estates will be Worsley Hall, a splendid, stately old seat just out of Manchester. It was built in the time of Edward VI., with turrets and towers, moats and drawbridges. The Earl of Ellesmere is a multimillionaire, and the young Viscount Brackley is his son and heir.

When the immensely wealthy young Harcourt Powell married the dainty little creature who appeared nightly in "Love Birds," every one thought at first that he must have married a relative. The young woman's name happened to be Powell, too—coincidence Powell—and Harcourt's entire family smiled so upon her that some one said in congratulating his mother:

"Ah, so you like her dance?"

"No, no," said Lady Powell, "but have you seen her dance?"

At once, confessed the visitor who had not dared to mention the fact before. "Why, we have all seen her," said Lady Powell, "and we think that she is pretty more than pretty. She is the dear Marchioness of Headfort, who was a friend of hers. Of course, however, now that she has married my son, she will retire completely from the stage and become a thoroughly domestic wife, just like the dear Marchioness of Headfort."

For hundreds of nights Rosie Boote sang that song, and for hundreds of nights the young Marquis listened to it. His devotion grew with time. About the fair singer's neck was suspended a diamond heart on a coral necklace. Within the heart was a picture of the dark, rather handsome Marquis of Headfort.

Things now began to assume a serious aspect, and every one said: "It was really too dreadful. What! A girl from the Gaiety to be a Marchioness! Impossible!" It was said that an aunt of the young Marquis had offered Rosie Boote $50,000 if she would only throw the Marquis over. Girl singing part and then an important part. She rose and rose and rose. Of course, no one dreamt how far she would go until during the progress of "The Messenger Boy" at the Gaiety Theatre the gossip began to mingle with hers the name of the fourth Marquis of Headfort, a peer of the realm.

"Of course there was nothing in it," they said, but all the same there he was every night listening to her sing.

"Some day I mean to wed a Duke, don't doubt me."

And none will dare to hint rebuke about me."

They were the first two lines of a song called "Maisie Will Get There All the same," made popular from end to end of London by Rosie Boote.

Close upon that followed the denouement. In spite of negotiations and denials the young couple had eloped and were married. In spite of rebellions and maledictions the young couple have settled down and been happy ever since. Every one has decided to forgive them, even their fine old Queen. The Marchioness of Headfore reigns charmingly over a lovely estate in Hampshire, where her neighbor and greatest admirer is Mrs. George Cornwallis West and where the aristocrats of London come to visit her and speak reverentially of the charms of the Gaiety Girl.

Unfortunately the lashes have a way of falling out for apparently no reason. But let me say right here that they are affected by the health, by bad circulation, nervousness, anaemia. Sometimes they need a tonic. An excellent one may be made with tepid water and a few drops of cologne. Or rub them gently with a little castor oil.

"He Called Me on One Occasion a Cur, a Snipe and a Viper."

WHAT MR. A. HART M'KEE DID.

The Sworn Testimony of His Wife, which Mr. McKee Didn't Deny.

RESIDE in Allegheny City, where I was born and was married to Andrew Harrtupee McKee, November 21, 1892, at the First Presbyterian Church, Pittsburg. After my marriage we resided at No. 46 Beach street, Allegheny, for two years and then removed to No. 85 Lincoln avenue Allegheny, for eighteen months, when we moved to No. 940 Ridge avenue, Allegheny, where we lived until three years ago. We spent more than a year traveling. We lived East more than six months in each year and spent two Winters in New York City. The Summers of those years we spent at different Summer resorts, principally Southampton, N. Y.

I returned to Allegheny February 14, 1901, and now reside at No. 1015 Western avenue, with my father, Dr. R. S. Sutton. After our marriage we went abroad, sailing in November, 1892, and returned in February, 1893. I received the greatest indifference and neglect during our trip abroad and I was very much neglected while at the Hotel Metropole, Monte Carlo. This was in January, 1893. I was very ill at the time, and when I came to this hotel I had no attendant, no one but Mr. McKee with me.

I was left there alone and a servant finally discovered my condition. A physician, Dr. Fagge, then came in. He found me there alone in a dangerous condition, and he remained there with me until 12 o'clock at night until Mr. McKee could be found, and after that I was left in the care of a physician. I saw almost nothing of Mr. McKee except a few minutes during the day during that trip abroad.

I stayed at Monte Carlo until the 15th of the month and then, against the advice of the physician, I returned to this country. After we returned to this country Mr. McKee's treatment was unkind. We went to housekeeping. On one occasion he stated to me that the house and everything in the house belonged to him; that I had no right there except as he saw fit to give me. His conduct was indifferent and at times very insulting and abusive. He called me many ugly names. He called me on one occasion a cur, a snipe and a viper, and he would threaten me and threaten to make the house too hot to hold me. He threatened that he would make me crazy, and that he would make the place ring with reports of me. On one occasion he threw a loaded revolver across my body. While I was lying on the bed he threw the pistol across my body.

His ran along through periods of my early married life. On one occasion he threatened me that his mother would break my neck. There were several instances of violence at times when I was ill on the occasions of the births of my two children. February 2, 1895, was the birthday of our one child. During that time Mr. McKee removed door between my room and the room occupied by myself and the trained nurse. He would then arrange mirrors so that he could watch this young woman in all her movements about the room and while she was attending to me, her patient, and the baby. I requested the doors put back. I begged that they should be put back. He refused to have them put back. On one occasion I went to the bathroom adjoining my own room and locked the door. Mr. McKee appeared at the door and demanded that it be opened. I said that I would open it when I was through with the room. He then picked up a chair and battered in the door. This was a heavy door and he used a large rocking chair. It tore the lock out and the paneling of the door. There were two other bath rooms in the house which he could have used, one on the same floor.

I was in a wretched state of health. Prior to this I had gone to Atlantic City and my mother had gone with me at Mr. McKee's request. We then went to New York, where Mr. McKee was to join me, and my mother was to return home. Mr. McKee met us at the Holland House in a very disagreeable mood. He was very angry at my mother being there, while she was there at his own request. He said he would not take his meals at the table with her. I said I would return home that I would not stay in New York after that. He shook his finger at my face and said he would make me cringe. It was after this that the circumstance I have detailed in the house in Allegheny in breaking in the door occurred. This was when we were living in the Lincoln avenue house.

After we moved to the Ridge avenue house the course of conduct was about the same. It was while we were living at this house that he threw the pistol across my body. He received harsh treatment and he complained and I was condemned during our residence in Allegheny. In February, 1901, we left Allegheny. The house was not opened in Allegheny after 1901. That Winter we went to Florida, then to Lakewood, then to Monuronock, and then to Southampton. In Florida I was very much annoyed with his being out at night, sometimes as late as 6 o'clock in the morning, and if I protested I was told it was none of my business. It was not in a general way just as I have described.

In November, 1902, we took the house in New York, No. 3 East Forty-seventh street. We lived in that house until the following June, then we spent the Summer at Southampton, again, and in the following November moved to No. 15 East Thirty-sixth street, New York. During these months, that is during the Winter of 1902 and the Spring of 1903, I would scarcely see him. There would be several days at a time that I would not see him at all. There were ten days even that we would not have meals together. He would make arrangements for dinner and going to lunch over the telephone in my hearing, but I was not included in these cases. He seldom dined with me. He had his own table carried to him in his own room. He would often have his dinner carried to his own room, eat it there and then go out at 10 or 11 o'clock at night. I made a trip to Philadelphia in May, 1901.

He was very insulting on one occasion during this trip without any provocation whatever. He told me that any man might keep me for all he cared. He said that in the presence of one of the maids. Mr. McKee was not with me much during the two years. During this last year he was more neglectful as time proceeded. I left him February 18, 1903. The course of his conduct which preceded my leaving him was his entire neglect, absence from the house, cutting off of my personal allowance and household allowance, and

Will He Play the Same Tricks on His New Wife as He Did on His Divorced Wife?

What will the feelings be of the famously exquisite beauty, Cornelia Baxter, first Mrs Hugh Tevis, now Mrs. Hart McKee, who was so delicately nurtured and cultured and has been courted the world over, when she begins to digest this almost blood boiling arraignment against her new bridegroom by his other wife and the mother of his little baby girls?

In Pittsburg, in Pennsylvania, Mr. Hart McKee, the son of the plate glass prince, Henry S. McKee, had married, and his wife as was Lydia Sutton, the daughter of Dr. Rhoades Sunbury Sutton, of Allegheny.

He became infatuated with his own cousin, Genevieve Chandler, Mrs Lawrence C. Phipps, and on account of this infatuation Mr. Phipps got divorced from his wife.

Then, next Mrs. Phipps—well, she happened in her extremity to seek sympathy from her dear bosom friend, the lovely widow Tevis, and she presented him to the widow.

She was engaged to be married to McKee the moment the divorce from Phipps was granted, when the charming Mr. McKee suddenly and cheerfully left the divorced Mrs. Phipps to her own devices and the sights and calmly sailed off to Europe as adviser and counsellor to the rich widow, Mrs. Hugh Tevis. GREAT CHANCE TO GET A GOOD WIFE!

Pretty and Energetic Young Women Who Dont Want to Be 'Old Maids,' in a Scramble to Take Up Government Lands Where Scores of Bachelor Ranchers Are Terribly Lonesome.

HOW to get a good wife—on this page is one brilliant solution of that problem which vexes so many good men.

How to escape the danger of being an "old maid" is the other side of the same problem, which finds here an equally hopeful solution.

Out in western Kansas some scores of lonesome bachelor ranchers are the most interested spectators of a grand rush to their neighborhood of eligible young women from localities where the supply of husbands is far short of the demand. From one Kansas county where all the desirable men are already married no less than thirty-eight energetic and comely girls and young widows have set forth in search of homes in another Kansas county, where most of the men are wifeless and lonesome.

Moreover, in other counties there are a million acres of desirable government lands awaiting settlement by husbandless women and wifeless men, who in this way will meet and cause the wilderness to bloom.

Here is another of the many indications, frequently recorded in this newspaper, showing that women nowadays are brainy and intelligently going to work to settle their own future instead of waiting for Cupid to choose. In this matter as in many others men are not left out of the calculation—as details from the scene clearly show.

GRANT COUNTY, in the west central part of this State, has suddenly become the 17 United Land for marriageable women and girls, widows and even "old maids"—who want husbands and find a lack of raw material lesser Louis.

Already thirty-eight energetic future wives of lonesome Grant County ranchers have made raw clothes and packed their trunks in the adjoining county of Finney, where every man worth having is married and the father of a family.

The Grant County matrimonial opportunity is so alluring, and so well advertised, that husbands-to-be from as far away as Kansas City, St. Louis, Topeka and Emporia are hurrying preparations that will enable them to seize it. In fact, so great is the first enthusiasm over this newest method of bringing the unwedded together that other sparsely settled counties of Western Kansas and Nebraska are likely soon to offer similar inducements to the superfluous women of other parts of the country.

Nor is it even a mere brilliant scheme to solve the old male problem of thickly settled centres, and make the wilderness bloom. Yet it is a big asset of science.

The marriage-able girl gets a quarter section of fertile, well-watered Government land, together with it with her goods and chattels, and a neighboring lonesome rancher comes along and marries the girl and has two farms where he had one before, with a wife thrown in.

A Rush of "Old Maids" to Kansas.

Naturally, these fair candidates for broad acres and husbands are coy when interviewed on the latter part of the proposition.

"Marry?" said Miss Stella Carpenter, of Kansas City, as she was passing through Topeka followed by half a car load of household goods in charge of a younger brother who will help her to get settled in her Grant County home. "Why should I marry? Can I not, have 160 acres of my own, and the best land in Kansas?"

"Are there really so many unmarried men in Grant County?" asked Miss Ellen Miller, of Emporia, whose mother was actually born on the promised land.

Her eyes were full of innocent wonder when Mrs. J. Sanders, a widow of St. Louis, was going out to Grant County to prepare for building operations on her quarter [illegible] Spring, so as to be ready for Frank Wise, yes of course, I might marry again if the right man came along."

Miss Ruth Dodge, of this city, is men[illegible] one who will superintend Spring [illegible] Grant County quarter sec[illegible]

Nobody the first woman to seize this [illegible] city were the unmated ones [illegible] the county of Finney, where [illegible] are scarce. Among [illegible] Miss Rachel Helmig, of Zyba; Miss [illegible] of Berryville, Miss Ruth [illegible] of Hugoton, Mrs. Mary Bucher, of Garden City—all young and abundantly able to undergo the hardships of early settlers.

Brilliant Scheme to Settle Country.

And as they are attractive in appearance, as well as energetic, it is not thought likely that their unmarried rancher neighbors [illegible] will be left long single and [illegible]

The promoter of this novel scheme to [illegible] arrangements where they are soon to be [illegible] E. M. Henthorn, a real estate man and politician of Grant County. By increasing the number of unmarried women he hopes to increase the population of the county. There are more young ranchmen in Grant County who are unmarried, then in any other "short grass" county in Kansas. Mr. Henthorn, who is a bright young man, owning a great deal of real estate in Grant County, conceived the idea of inviting unmarried women and widows into the county and having them take up homesteads. The land was to be had for living on it a few months and paying a small price per acre, because it still belonged to the Government. Mr. Henthorn believes that the young women who will come in there will eventually marry the ranchmen, and that the result will be an increase in the population and a speedy settling of the whole county—and, naturally, they will all be his political friends.

Recently Mr. Henthorn visited Garden City, the seat of Finney County, and induced thirty-eight of the widows and other unmarried women to go to Grant County. Finney County, in the matter of population, is small and Mr. Henthorn has enrolled all the volunteers which could be found among the unmarried women. The young politician says that he will invade other counties so soon as the unmarried women he has brought into Grant County from Finney have found their mates.

Fair Applicants by Hundreds.

The experiment of Mr. Henthorn is attracting wide attention among the Kansas men and women. It is the first time anything of the kind has ever been tried in the State, and the people who have learned of it are watching with great interest. If Mr. Henthorn succeeds in marrying the young women to the rich young Grant County farmers, he will have more applications from unmarried women in the State than he can fill. There are only a few of the Grant County ranchmen who are unmarried, and it is probable that only about thirty more unmarried women can be accommodated after those now on the ground are married.

Then will follow a similar colonization of other counties. It does not matter if the women get there first, as then there will be an unusual inducement for pioneers of the other sex.

A. H. Norris, a Government land inspector, who lives in Garden City, Finney County, is delighted with the scheme for the colonization of old maids and widows in Grant County.

"There is no longer any chance for these women to be married in our county," he said. "They have lived there for years, and the young men have married a number of them. Those who remain unmarried can have no hope of finding husbands. They have tried for years, and, while I do not care to be put into the circle of hoping that those who have failed to find husbands in our county have entered the scheme to move to Grant County, I will say that many of the young women who are leaving our county are doing so to obtain homesteads in Grant County.

"Grant County is one of the best in our part of the State, and there is no reason why our young women should not have homes there. Of course, there is nothing on the face of things to prove that they are seeking husbands, but Mr. Henthorn has promised to have them all married before they have been in the county six months.

Making Clothes, Packing Trunks.

"The exodus of our unmarried women to Grant County has not commenced, but the thirty-eight unmarried women who have agreed to go to the county are very busy preparing their clothes. The movement will deprive us of all of the unmarried women we have in the county, but we can stand it if Grant County can. Some of the women cannot hope to get married, as they are too far along in years. I will not mention the names of these, because it would make me trouble at home, but some of those who have decided to go are among the prettiest in the county.

"They are nervy young women, who are willing to take their chances in making their way, and if they fail to get the husbands who are supposed to be waiting for them they can make good livings off the homesteads which they can get in the county by merely living on the land."

F. Dumont Smith, who represents in the State Senate the district in which Mr. Henthorn lives, is enthusiastic over the plan. He says that the young women of his home town of Kinsley are very much in favor of the plan, and they will apply for homesteads in the county if the plan now being tried is successful.

"I do not know," said Senator Smith, "when there has been more excitement in our part of the State than there is now over this scheme of colonizing old maids and widows. I never heard of it until Mr. Henthorn advertised it in our part of the country. He announced that he had all of the applicants that could find places at that time. It appears that there are now only thirty-eight ranchmen in that county who want to get married. These young men seem to be behind the scheme which Mr. Henthorn has sprung. They do not appear before the public as demanding wives, but they will take the Finney County girls who go into the county in the search of husbands and homesteads.

A Million Acres of Free Lands.

"I am surprised that none of our real estate agents have thought of this scheme before. It is full of possibilities. We have a million acres of free land in the western part of Kansas, and the women who are looking for husbands will have no trouble in homesteading a quarter section of land beside the ranch of some wealthy young ranchman. Every unmarried person, or the head of every family, is allowed to take 160 acres of Government land, and Mr. Henthorn is merely the pioneer in a movement which is certain to become general in our part of the country.

"There is no doubt about the genuineness of Mr. Henthorn's plan. He came to Kinsley, where I live, a few years ago and suggested the plan to me. I did not think much of it at the time, and refused to have anything to do with it. Since that time he has consulted A. H. Norris and other residents of Garden City and has found that they believe in the scheme. I see the possibilities of it now, and am watching closely to note the result."

Besides Grant, there are six fertile, well watered counties in the southwestern part of Kansas which are now sparsely settled and offer fine opportunities for the extension of this "old maid colonization" scheme. They are Hamilton, Stanton, Morton, Stevens, Seward and Haskell.

The Scheme Works Both Ways.

As has already been noted, the scheme works both ways. Many of the scattering ranchers in this region are now waiting the need of wives. This fact is largely responsible for the slow settling up of the country. Unmarried young men hesitate to swell the bachelor population, with the more than uncertainty of finding a sweetheart who will follow them to the wilderness, and women who are already the wives of farmers discourage pioneering because of the hardships attending the building of a new home.

The growing dread of old maidhood which burdens the hearts of so many women in all thickly populated parts of the country is shown by Mr. Henthorn's experiment to be the much needed inspiration for the utilization of these fertile lands. Apparently no eligible young woman need fear the present lack of marriageable men there. She may take up her quarter section of Government land, locate upon it, in no matter how small a way, and the very knowledge of her presence will send half a dozen young pioneers of the opposite sex hustling to secure a claim adjoining hers. And there is room for thousands.

Nowhere in the world could venturesome young women be sure of a warmer welcome. Every county politician, real estate operator and trader will welcome her, and give her all possible aid in starting a home where some lonesome rancher will be certain to follow her. It is the history of all their breeds, from pure love of independence. Therefore, why should they not go to a new country and start with the capital in fertile lands which the Government is so willing to turn over to them?

If would-be husbands are there eagerly waiting for them, or others hasten to follow them—why, so be it!

This is the way Mr. Henthorn's "old maid colonists" look at it—for publication. In their hearts they are in search of good husbands. Certainly they are offering the best of chances for men to get good wives more than she wants a husband.

There's a lot of romance in it, too. Husband-chasing! Not a bit of it! The new woman developing her legitimate career. All over the country women are doing all sorts of things—including ranching—quite independently of male assistance. They are doing these things in thickly settled sections, where there is a surplus of women, with no matrimonial purpose in view. Therefore, why should they not go to a new country and start with the capital in fertile lands which the Government is so willing to turn over to them?

If would-be husbands are there eagerly waiting for them, or others hasten to follow them—why, so be it!

This is the way Mr. Henthorn's "old maid colonists" look at it—for publication. In their hearts they are in search of good husbands. Certainly they are offering the best of chances for men to get good wives

MORE THAN ANY QUEEN

TREMENDOUS IMPORTANCE

Of the Love Affairs of Little Miss Bertha Krupp, Who Owns and Manages the Great German Ship and Gun Works, Covering More Than 2,000 Acres, and Upon Whose Acts the Livelihood of 150,000 People Depends.

LATEST PHOTOGRAPH OF MISS BERTHA KRUPP, WITH

EXTERIOR VIEWS OF PARTS OF THE KRUPP GUN WORKS AT ESSEN.

PART OF THE GROUNDS SURROUNDING THE KRUPP VILLA IN CAPRI.

A View of the Krupp Works at Essen, Showing Guns and Heavy Mounting for Ships of War.

The coming marriage of Miss Bertha Krupp is of more importance to more people in a real and personal way than the marriage of any crowned head in all Europe would be. The reason is that this little girl, holding in her hands the absolute management of the greatest single industry in Germany, is more powerful than the German Emperor.

This statement does not mean that Miss Krupp can reduce salaries, or build warships as giving employment to still more thousands, or increase the wages of any of the skilled and unskilled laborers employed in the Krupp works.

All this great army, with its dependents whose aid amounts to a population of 150,000 souls, looks to her supremacy for its means of subsistence and for what luxuries it enjoys.

There is no other woman in the world to-day independently rich as the daughter and sole heiress of Germany's famous gun manufacturer, certainly none holds in her hands the present existence and future prosperity of so many individuals. This is because, being unmarried, she is independent of any sort of control—her Board of Directors can only advise; it cannot dictate.

Sooner or later this little girl will take a husband. And when that momentous event happens the arrangement upon which the Krupp works rests positively certain of nothing. Under the German marriage law this husband will have not only the customary superior influence of husbands, but a powerful hand in the management of the property she will bring to him. The great question is, what sort of a husband will he turn out to be?

Betrothed to a Poor Doctor!

Recent engagements announced and rumored that Miss Krupp has decided to marry a poor young physician, Dr. Heck, of Rheydt, Rhenish Prussia. Once her name was connected in this way with that of Fritz Mannesmann, president of the Reinische Manufacturing Company, and once with that of Herr Deichmann, son of a Cologne banker; but in neither of these cases was there any confirmation of a formal betrothal, which in Germany is a necessary step as important as that of marriage itself.

In choosing her own husband little Miss Krupp will show herself to be more powerful than any crowned head. She could choose herself a king and princes are seldom able to do. It is not necessary for her to consider the question of rank, and, of course, she may ignore that of fortune. Is this a favorable augury for the army dependent upon her?

Will the man she finally marries refrain from exercising his rights and influence respecting the management of his wife's great property? If he be the poor doctor, will he turn out to have philanthropic views which will make the great Krupp establishment an opportunity for the theoretical improvement of all mankind at the expense of the Krupp employes, whose interests were always so near to the heart of Baron Krupp?

The Name "Lord of Thunder."

These and other questions going more into detail have agitated the inhabitants of Essen—nearly all of whom are Krupp employes or indirect beneficiaries—since rumor developed into a formal engagement announcement. This little girl, who is beautiful and gentle, who is absolute mistress of a fortune estimated at $75,000,000, and who enjoys an income of $3,000,000 a year through her almost complete ownership of the Krupp Works, is beloved by her army of employes, who call her their "Lady of Thunder."

In the years since her father's death they have learned that she is indeed "the daughter of her father," that what the Krupp works and the Krupp employes meant to him they mean to her, and have silenced all doubts that the female line could not worthily uphold the Krupp dynasty. From this on, until time shows that marriage cannot alter even a female Krupp, they will, of course, be anxious.

The three groups of works managed and controlled by Miss Krupp are at Essen, Kiel and Grusson. They cover an aggregate of more than 2,000 acres of ground—and the model towns and villages of workmen's residences built for them by the late Baron Krupp would make a large city.

Krupp guns are turned out complete. The Essen works are largely occupied in the manufacture of heavy guns and armor plate, while at each plant there are furnaces for the making of steel and mills for rolling it into various giant forms of war machinery.

The kingdom over which Bertha Krupp reigns also contains numerous coal and iron mines, a stretch of country twenty miles long upon which to test the great guns made in the Krupp works, and big shipping interests with headquarters at Rotterdam.

War Machines for All the World.

The Krupp works at Essen use more water than the entire city of Munich, and more gas than the great city of Munich. Day and night, the year round, the product of these works is being poured out into all corners of the world. Germany's wonderful new navy equipment, begun only a few years ago, would have been impossible without the Krupp works, and doubtless the total of peace and war between the czar and the Mikado, but for the artillery known and made by Krupp.

It has taken three generations of Krupps to establish the immense industry which started in 1810 with Peter Friedrich Krupp's little smelting furnace for the manufacture of cast steel. And in each generation, up to the accession of Bertha Krupp, one son was educated and trained in detail to have entire charge and devote his whole life to the family enterprise.

Because the late Baron Krupp had no son he caused his eldest daughter to be educated and trained in the same way, to be his successor. Long before she finished her ordinary schoolgirl studies she was made acquainted with the intricacies of the business of manufacturing fire arms, of the use of the harsh ponderous war materials with which to obstruct each other's aggressions.

Maintains the Family Fame.

It is said of little Bertha Krupp that she inherited not only her father's strength of character, but his sweet and kindly disposition. Keen as a bit of a girl studying arithmetic and grammar with tutors in her father's home, she knew about her destiny. She was her father's constant companion. Almost before she was in long dresses she understood the whole Krupp business in theory, and at the time of Baron Krupp's death this knowledge had been supplemented by days and months of observation in different departments of the works.

So when it came to be her turn to maintain the family name and fame, it was impossible for any superintendent or any board of directors to lead her far away from the ancestral Krupp ideal.

She was a pretty child, and her prettiness developed into something which her photographs indicate to be very much like beauty. Yet she was able to deny herself the triumphs which a social career strews in the path of beauty. Up to two or three years ago society in Essen, or in Cologne, Munich, Dresden or Berlin hardly knew her at all, except when society, represented by an emissary of the Kaiser, visited her father's house on some important mission connected with army or navy armaments.

As soon as little Miss Krupp began to realize the immensity of the industry which she would some day be called upon to manage, she found herself irresistibly attracted to its philanthropic side—to the measures taken for the comfort and proper education of the army of employes. Her father had been satisfied to leave these matters largely in the hands of trusted managers. Miss Krupp, on the contrary, gave the same attention to the details of the Krupp philanthropic and charitable institutions that she gave to a mastery of the business itself.

Striking out for herself on new lines she began experimenting with a model workmen's colony containing six hundred families, providing them with cottages of their own designing and applying to them every fresh discovery in hygienic and sanitary science, and leaving nothing undone that it seemed to her would make her people better and happier.

She is known and blessed by every gray-headed Krupp pensioner, who, after a lifetime of service, is spending his declining years in comfort as a member of the Altenhof colony. These faithful old workmen dwell in cottages built like little villas in one of the most idyllic parts of the valley of the Ruhr. They are no longer of any use to the great Krupp industry, yet little Miss Krupp visits them regularly several times a month, talks to them and their wives, inspects their houses and gardens, and if anything is lacking supplies that lack without loss of time.

She knows all these old people by name, knows their history and their troubles, and has been comparatively few visitors to the Villa Hugel, where—but for the duties imposed by the Krupp industry little Miss Krupp, her mother and her sister would lead lives lonely indeed. This mansion which will soon receive as master a poor German doctor, is really a splendid palace on a hill overlooking the winding Ruhr and the mighty works of Essen, obscured partly by the veil of smoke which hangs over them perpetually, and with its background of superb woods and gardens.

This palace is one of the glories of its part of Germany. It is a masterpiece of masonry art. For years five hundred masons worked at its carving and polishing the light French sandstone until their work was perfect. The interior is in keeping with this exterior, but the busy young mistress of the greatest gun works in the world rarely finds use for more than two small rooms in it.

In midwinter, if she can get away from business, she accompanies her mother and sister for a few weeks' stay at the Krupp Villa on a wine-hill hillside in Capri. Perhaps here is the scene of the forthcoming honeymoon, which the privates in the great Krupp army are now so much dreading.

There is one thing little Miss Krupp's great industrial army feels favorably certain of, that is that even marriage will not part her from her continued practical interest in the charitable and philanthropic work of the Krupp establishment. She will arrange [illegible] and personally [illegible] and presided [illegible] and their wives [illegible] part of the great works to assure herself that all is well with the active officers of her army. They believe that she has been so carefully trained up in the Krupp atmosphere and faith to surrender all into the hands of a husband.

WHY MEN MARRY THE DISAGREEABLE GIRL OF THE FAMILY.

An Important Question Sensibly Discussed by a Connoisseur.

"Man's a strange animal and makes strange use of the gifts his own good God has given him," [illegible] remarked the other day in point revealing the astonishing fact that it is quite possible for a girl to be too nice and sweet [illegible]

[illegible] was [illegible] the question of a friend of mine, who six months ago married a girl who [illegible] he [illegible] was [illegible] the most disagreeable, ungracious and independent female of the particular social circle in which she moved. Once [illegible] enough, when this man was first [illegible] about the girl before being introduced to her, he casually passed the remark that he "would be sorry for the man who married her."

I slyly asked him recently if he was sorry for himself and he begged me to [illegible] remark with [illegible] for he was really the happiest married man alive.

"It is true [illegible] is a bit [illegible] naturally of a disposition, frank to a degree, and therefore disagreeable according to many [illegible] ideas of [illegible] and [illegible] agree for [illegible] and [illegible] fear with all they say and do. It is also true that she had the reputation of being [illegible] a bit of a shrew amongst her male friends, and she has laughingly confessed to me since our marriage that she believes she frightened more than one suitor away on this account. She was, in fact, one of the few girls who did not court popularity by being as 'nice' as she possibly could on all occasions, and I believe that is why I fell in love with her almost as soon as we were introduced."

This man's explanation of his marriage affair puzzled me the more because I knew that his reputation before marriage had been quite different to that of the woman he married. He, in fact, had been voted by his women friends as the most popular man in their particular set, and I have no doubt that there were a few sighs and just a little heart-aching hidden under the congratulations which they showered upon him when his engagement was announced; and, of course, the most miserable life was predicted for him after his marriage with the odious Miss Dislike.

But they were all wrong, both in their predictions, their estimate of Miss Dislike's character, and the qualities which some men look for in the girl they would wed. A census of the opinions of half a dozen men which I was led to seek after considering the case in point revealed the astonishing fact that it is quite possible for a girl to be too nice and sweet [illegible]

A Visit to Port Arthur in the

BY COL. EDWIN EMERSON, JR.

"SINCE you bring us nothing, why did you come here?" General Stoessel asked me as the guard brought me and my French companion, M. Van Lerberghe, before the commander. We had run the Japanese blockade and, taking nothing but a general letter of identification from Count Lamsdorff, at Washington, had little idea of what would be my fate in the forbidden beleaguered city.

I endeavored to explain to General Stoessel that I had come to see something of the last days of the heroic defense of Port Arthur. Stoessel invited us into his drawing room and questioned me further.

"You have brought us no letters?" he asked again. "No dispatches or letters from our consul at Chefoo? And you have brought us no news, sirs?"

A shade of disappointment clouded General Stoessel's face at our negative answer. "We have had no news whatever from outside for more than three weeks," he explained. "It is as if, at two days' journey from Dalny, whence our own consul can send us many cablegrams, you were in the city of London, whence our consul can send us many cablegrams. It really looks as if they were withholding news from us on purpose. Long ago I noticed a reluctance on their part to let us know the truth about affairs outside that might have the effect of disheartening us. Since they trust us to hold the place they might trust us to have sufficient fortitude to hear the truth no matter how disagreeable. The Consul General of ours is a disappointment, anyway. His promised activity in our behalf isn't much to boast of. He promised me that he would undertake to arrange wireless telegraphic communication with us from Chefoo, but it has come to nothing."

"Where is Kuropatkin now?" he asked suddenly. "And how does it stand with him?"

I told him that the latest newspaper despatches still reported Kuropatkin at Mukden and that Oyama was supposed to be about to attack Mukden.

Stoessel's face expressed blank consternation. In a rapid undertone he requested his aide-de-camp in Russian to take my French companion aside and probe him to discover whether or not he had read the same report, and whether he had any reason to believe it true. Of course M. Van Lerberghe could only confirm the report.

In the meantime I had told General Stoessel of the battle of Liao-Yang as it had been explained to me by correspondents, fresh from the front, who had witnessed it. Out of regard for his feelings I laid some stress on the final conclusion of several of these correspondents that the Russian retreat from Liao-Yang was a foreordained strategic evacuation, for the success of which much credit was due to Kuropatkin.

General Stoessel received this cold comfort with an impatient toss of his head. "Our latest information," he said, "was that Kuropatkin was marching southward to attack the rear of the Japanese."

"And so he is the Lamsdorff dispatch," resumed Stoessel after a pause. We told him what the latest reports had said.

Stoessel rose from his seat and paced silently up and down the room. Then he remarked quietly to Colonel Reitz in Russian: "It looks as if we should either have to die here or make up our minds to go to Japan."

Happily an orderly just then opened the doors into the adjoining room and announced that luncheon was ready. General Stoessel invited us to join him at table. In the dining room we found the general's wife and a young lady whom I took to be his daughter. They were very simply dressed, in morning gowns of brown and black cotton. Introducing ourselves after the Russian fashion we all sat down at the long table, one end of which had been set for us. I found myself placed between the general and the younger lady. She, too, as well as Madame Stoessel, spoke only Russian. It was a frugal meal in Russian style, with the usual accompaniment of vodka, wine and tea. Hearing that I liked kvas, the refreshing Russian beverage made of fermented bread, Madame Stoessel ordered a foaming pitcher of it, which the general and I divided between us. In view of what we heard of the dearth of fresh food at Port Arthur, I expressed my surprise at finding a juicy beefsteak set before us. At this General Stoessel and the others laughed heartily. It was explained to me that what I had taken for beefsteak was really horse flesh.

The entrance of a white-haired officer, very brisk, but deaf as a post, brought general animation. He turned out to be General Balashoff, chief of the Red Cross hospitals and a hero of the Turkish-Russian war. The grizzly old warrior, with his crucifix of St. George dangling from his collar, gallantly kissed the hands of the ladies, and, sitting down, now in one seat and now in another, addressed my friend in French and me in German, while he helped himself from any dish that came handy. Throughout the meal we could hear the dull booming of the big guns from the ramparts and outside.

I was just shouting some trivial remark about the weather into Balashoff's ear for the third time when a terrific detonation, apparently quite close to the house, made all the dishes on the table rattle. From above could be heard the clattering of shivered window panes. The young lady on my right composedly offered me some more kvas. Madame Stoessel continued her conversation with the young aide-de-camp. Only Colonel Reitz seemed to take any interest in what had happened. Rising from his seat he glanced across the table out of the window and then sat down again.

"Where did it strike?" asked Stoessel, in explanation of the Japanese, at first [illegible] a matter of fact tone.

How Robin-Red-Breast Wooed and Won the Canary.

The Prettiest and Most Novel Romance in Years which Began on the Stage and Ends in Real Life.

PHOTOS BY WILL ARMSTRONG ART PHOTOGRAPHER BOSTON

Miss Dorothy Holt, the Yellow Canary.

Mr. Charles H. Bowers and Miss Holt Singing a Robin and Canary Love Duet.

Charles H. Bowers, joined it, taking the part of Robin Red Breast. The company then started on a Western tour, going to Chicago and as far as Omaha during the fall.

Mr. Bowers was at once attracted to the little canary, who had never been a day away from the home nest before. To him, a traveled, seasoned actor, with ten years of stage life behind him, she was the real innocent little ingenue, which is the subject of one of the songs of the play.

The beginning of his love cooing was when, he trilled to her on the stage the words of "The Sweet Little Ingenue":

"When I meet an ingenue I'm enraptured
How romantic, still I'm frantic;
By her mien and modest ways I'm captivated,
Though I don't know how to win her hand."

To the gallant Robin Red Breast Dorothy Holt, as the little turtle dove, carolled back,

"Oh, the ingenue you're quite overrated,
Pretty dreamer, clever schemer
Don't imagine that she's unsophisticated,
She's already learned a thing or two.
Well she knows each word of love that you utter."

It was at one of the one-night stands in the West, when the star Turtle Dove was ill, that Dorothy Holt came forward took this part and sang the love ditty with Robin Red Breast.

No one in the audience dreamed that this was the beginning of a real romance, though the Robin did warble marvellously sweet as he drew the little Turtle Dove to his gorgeous red breast.

From that hour fell, handsome Mr. Bowers took the "sweet little ingenue" under his protecting wing through all the long wearisome Western trip, with its hardships of short stops at little towns with poor hotels, and big, bewildering prairie cities.

In the part of Robin Red Breast Mr. Bowers wore a jacket of red feathers, a red hat shaped like a robin's head, with long beak and gray tights.

Dorothy Holt was very birdlike in a costume of canary yellow feathers and a bird's head hat.

The bird songs in its way into the heart quite like the canary. Its mellow cooing love note is one of the most affectionate sounds in nature. So Robin Red Breast whispered to the demure little canary and he sang

"There is no sorrow in its song,
No Winter in its year"

And the shy little canary trilled back

"Ha, ha, my fine fellow
In the long a full-throated o
Comes upon the robin's breast."

And so these two human birds, Robin Red Breast and the little canary sang themselves through woodland straight into love land.

Big strong Robin Red Breast was very gay in his brilliant feathers and red hat, and his handsome brown eyes were always coaxing the gaze of the little canary. She thought no bird in woodland nor in all loveland could trill and thrill and chant such songs of love and gladness as Robin Red Breast.

So the more the little yellow-winged canary saw him the more she loved him.

The Blackbirds That Watched the Wooing of the Robin and the Canary.

Wherever he was there was light and song, but she did not see what there was in her little innocent twitter to so attract him. Perhaps when the Winter came he would spread his wings and fly away to the South land, as all robins do—she twitted to him.

"Not so, not so, sweet bird," sang this cheery Robin, who was a self-respecting bird and ever constant in love.

The songs of all the other birds of "Woodland" thereafter seemed nower to Robin Red Breast. They had none of the flute-like plaintiveness of the little canary. Her robe of yellow feathers became her so well and the bird's head hat perched upon her soft fluffy fair hair that shone like cornsilk was very bewitching. The more he knew her the more he adored her.

The jollity of the handsome Robin Red Breast was absolutely contagious, and the whole season of early Winter, which is usually silent and melancholy with birds, was one continual carnival to these two birds in love.

To be sure, Robin Red Breast was almost twice as old as the little Canary. He was thirty, and she but sixteen.

"But there are no years in love," said the little Canary, when this was pressed upon her.

"We count time not as a dial, but by our heart throbs," answered the Robin. Sadly enough the time came when the roving Robin did fly away to the South, with "The Girl from Dixie" company.

Then the Black Birds and Blue Jays of Woodland all sat on a limb and chattered "Ha, ha."

The little Canary fluttered back to her home nest, to await the coming of Spring and the return of Robin Red Breast, for no bird is so constant as a robin. She knows that in the glad Easter time he will be back, though all the girls in Dixieland try to ensnare him.

In some woodland nook they will be married and flit away to the New Hampshire hills to spend a honeymoon all Summer long.

14-Year-Old Charles Watts, the Biggest Boy in the World, and His Teacher, Standing on the Steps of the School House.

If the Fattest Boy in the World Marries the Fattest Girl

PROFESSOR METCHNIKOFF, of the Pasteur Institute, of Paris, is trying to make the biggest boy and the biggest girl on earth marry. He is doing it for the sake of science and for the benefit of civilization.

"Advance of civilization demands every man to be more and more of a specialist," says Professor Metchnikoff in his letters to the parents of these monster children. "The future will demand men of all sizes as well as all sorts of intellects. There are plenty of undersized men and dwarfs and always will be.

"But the production of a giant calls for an extra effort on nature's part, which she makes only occasionally. When a giant is born, nature's gift of size is offset in the next generation by his marriage to a woman of normal or, often, smaller size.

"The only way to have a supply of giants on hand is to carefully breed for them, just as big horses or big cattle are bred. It is high time that we set about collecting and breeding a herd of giants. When we have a stock of several hundred of both sexes on hand we can develop men of almost any size we please."

The professor has set his heart on a great match between Charles Watts, the biggest boy on earth, and Mertie Willbolt, the biggest girl.

They are too young for matrimony at the present date, but as alliances between princes and princesses are solemnly pledged soon after birth, Professor Metchnikoff sees no difficulty in this case. He is corresponding with the parents and intends to have the youngsters visit Paris, if all parties appear agreeable.

The boy is Charles Watts, of the small Kentucky village of Woodchurch, boy and. He is 5 feet tall and weighs 330 pounds. Watts is as powerful as he is heavy, for a large part of his weight is good bone and muscle.

The boy is bright and studious, and does well in his special seat in the little schoolroom. Out of school hours he helps his father on the farm. When Charles is at school or away from the farm the father has to hire two men to do the boy's work. This is not a net profit, however, as Charles eats twice as much as an ordinary Englishman and needs more clothes and room.

Football is his chief delight. His position is centre rush, where his vast bulk tower above the other youngsters like a veritable Gulliver among the Lilliputians.

Opposing teams have found it not only hopeless but dangerous to play this team with its giant centre. Toward the last of the season the games were so unequal that various expedients were tried to offset Watt's weight. One team of boys was allowed to play a full grown man, a black smith, against him. After the blacksmith had been pulled out of the bottom of a pile under the Watts boy a few times he said that he would have to go back to his forge. But he didn't for nearly a week on account of bumps and strains.

In school his teacher, needless to say, rules him wholly by kindness and persuasion.

Nine-year-old Miss Mertie Wilbo't, of Lebanon, Kentucky, weighs 220 pounds and gives every promise of being as tall and heavy as her intended fiance when both have reached a marriageable age.

When measured recently, the child was found to be 4 feet 9 inches in height, 46 inches around the bust, 31 inches around the waist and 16 inches around the neck. The circumference of her arm is 13 inches and her wrist is 6 inches around.

She has a younger brother and sister, and like them is considered unusually bright. Like Master Watts, she is very strong, and in a recent tug of war proved herself fully equal to her whole arithmetic class of eight girls.

Are Modern Girls Too Great a Rush to Get Married?

Some Observations by an Experienced Bachelor.

"NOW, please, mother dear, don't repeat that old, crusted proverb about marrying in haste and repenting at leisure. It is true Jack and I have only known each other six weeks; but we love one another so very dearly that we are only happy when together, and you can make both of us happier still by allowing our marriage to take place in a month's time."

"Mother dear" made a feeble protest against such "hustling" marriage methods, but she was overruled by the pleadings of her daughter. It was a great pity that she was a widow, and consequently without the support and advice of a husband. Friends who ventured to talk of the folly and danger of such a hasty marriage were given to understand that their lectures and advice were not required, and the wedding ceremony took place a month after it was first mentioned.

The result was what everybody feared would happen. Six months after the wedding the mother came to me and confessed how unhappy her daughter was. She repeated the arguments—some of which I have quoted at the beginning of this article—used by her daughter in favor of a speedy marriage, and plaintively remarked that she could not understand why her child was so unhappy with her husband.

As an old friend, I visited the couple on several occasions and discovered that, while love still existed between them, the real source of their trouble and unhappiness lay in the fact that they did not understand one another. There had been no time to study each other's characteristics and dispositions before marriage, and after the wedding ceremony the dull awakening came. Mabel had faults which Jack had never suspected, while Jack possessed weaknesses which shocked his wife. Their love was subjected to a severe strain on this account, and although it was strong enough to withstand the test, both became irritable on account of their discoveries and disappointments in each other.

The serene and ideal married life which they had pictured to themselves during their too brief courtship was disturbed, and consequently quarrels followed. For tunately, quiet talks and discreet suggestions led the wife to see where the fault lay, and caused her to make every effort to try and remedy matters, with the result that their home life is now become as much smoother and happier.

It is not every hasty marriage which turns out badly, however, which can thus be set right. The "old crusted proverb" applies as much to marriages to-day as it did when it was first written, whenever that may have been, and when you come to think of it, the chances are 10 to 1 against a girl in too great a hurry to be wed enjoying a happy married life. It is true that when a man asks a girl to marry him he pays her the highest compliment possible; but when a woman says "Yes" to such a proposal she must remember that she is placing her whole future, for weal or woe, in the hands of the man whom she takes for a husband.

A girl who possesses a fortune would never dream, unless she was out of her mind, of placing it in the hands of a man of whose character she knew nothing whatever, to be used just as he pleased. And yet there are hundreds of girls every year who trust something far more valuable than a fortune—their whole life's happiness—to the keeping of a man of whom they know little or nothing. Afterward they wonder what they have done to deserve the unhappiness which generally falls to their lot.

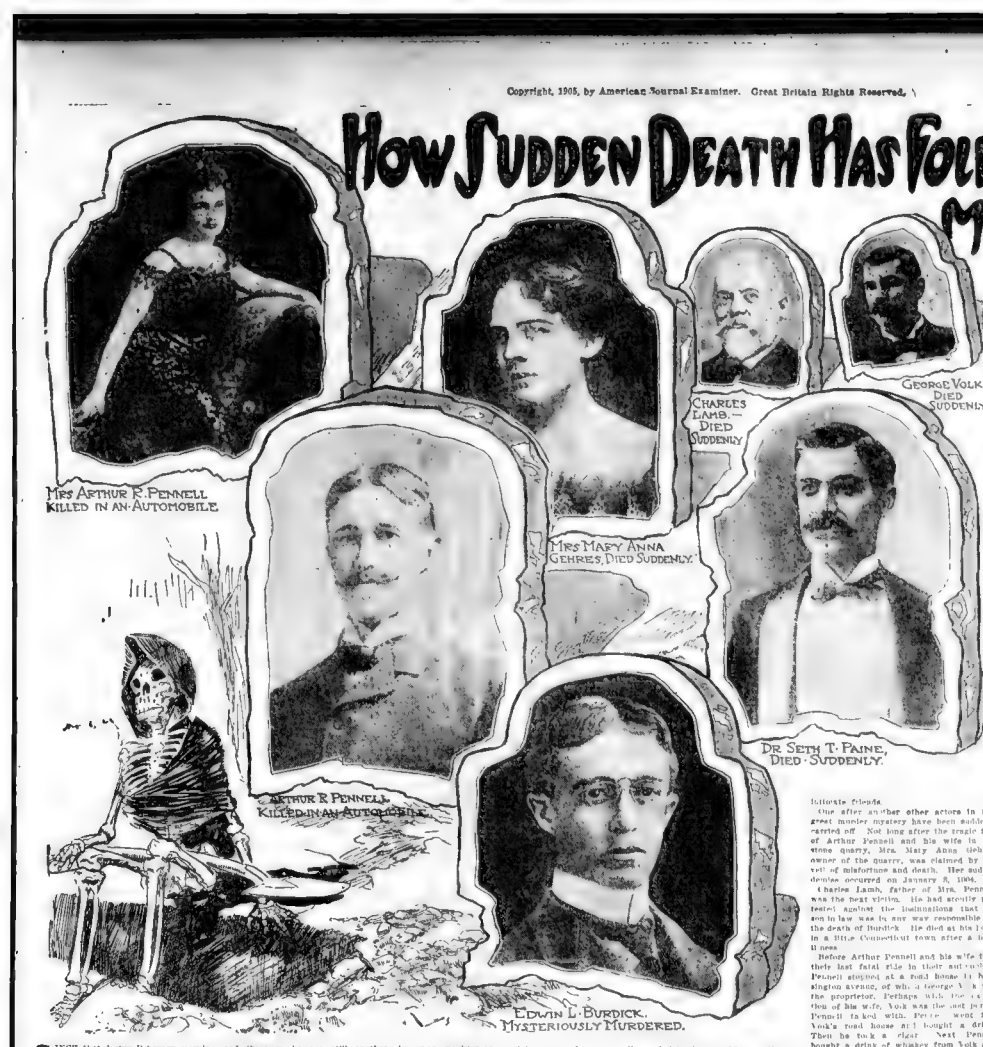
How Sudden Death Has Followed the Burdick Murder Mystery.

An Amazing Series of Seven Fatalities which Have Overtaken Many of the Prominent Participants in the Famous Buffalo Tragedy.



SINCE that dreary February morning, and three weeks ago still another, tae eenth, fell from a tree and was picked up lessless than two years ago, when Mill lionaire Edwin L. Who Will Win the Solid Gold Slipper Prize?

MRS. F. J. MINSTERKETTER, LOUISVILLE, KY.

MISS MARGARET ERVIN, CHATTANOOGA, TENN. AND HER POST

MISS CAVIE CLAYTON, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

THE judges in the contest for the solid gold slipper to be awarded to the proud possessor of the prettiest, smallest and most perfectly formed foot have found it impossible to reach a decision in time to announce the name of the prize-winner to-day. This is due principally to the fact that during the past week the "Slipper Contest" mail has been heavier than at any time since the competition began.

Taking advantage of the announcement made last Sunday that the post would not close during succeeding competitions would have for entering their names and feet in the contest, a great many seized the opportunity, and their [illegible] for the prize must be carefully considered before the judges reach a final decision.

As it is safe to assume that [illegible] have ever contemplated entering the contest have already done so it is suggested by the judges that no more entries be made unless it be in cases where the feet are exceptions of some kind except only pretty and distinctive and exceptionally well formed. This suggestion is made not with the idea of barring out any who desire to become contestants, but in order to facilitate the work of drawing up the contest to a close within as short a time as possible.

The task of selecting the prettiest, smallest and most perfect foot has proved a much more difficult and complicated one than many would readily suppose. Artists, sculptors and shoe experts have been called into consultation to decide upon the merits of the feet. In many cases requests were sent out to contestants for new and additional measurements to be made by their own shoemakers according to the latest shoemaking measurements. In fact no pains have been spared by the judges to find the foot most worthy of carrying off the solid gold trophy.

Many of the contestants whose photographs have been published in this newspaper in connection with the slipper contest have been deluged with mail from artists and others who have written to compliment them on the prettiness and smallness of their feet.

A possible avenue for several interesting romances, a la Cinderella, has been opened, as at least twenty contestants have written to say that since the photographs of their feet were published they have received very flattering offers of marriage from heretofore unknown admirers who frankly confessed that they had fallen in love with a foot and would like to lay siege to the accompanying hand and heart.

Several weeks ago a footprint and photograph of Miss Margaret H. Ervin, of Lookout Mountain, near Chattanooga, Tenn., was published. Two other photographs of Miss Ervin and her foot are published on this page to-day.

I greatly appreciate the honor you have already shown me in printing my photograph, letter and footprint," writes Miss Ervin in a letter received a few days ago. "And I wish to say at the start I feel encouraged and have hopes of winning the gold slipper. I am receiving every day letters from friends and utter strangers all over the United States. Many of them are from artists requesting photos of my foot.

One from New York city says: 'The undersigned hopes that the gold slipper will be won by you.' Another writes from New Ha mpshire, 'Having seen your photograph as a competitor for the gold slipper, I would like a photograph of your foot.' A Philadelphia artist writes: 'I am an artist, and would greatly appreciate a photograph and tracing of your foot.' One from Baltimore says: 'I am very much interested in the gold slipper contest, and may judge myself every Sunday while looking over the photographs of the contestants, and one object in writing to you is to compliment you on the smallness and beauty of your foot. I can assure you that next Sunday I will be one of the judges you would receive the prize. Yours is truly a foot to be proud of and, judging from the name writer, exceeding well formed. I am very sorry not to be able to see a photograph of the foot, as you know the Hearst newspapers did not publish one when the water print was introduced.' Another from Iowa writes: 'Having seen the water-print of your pretty little foot I must say it is the prettiest I have ever seen, and I am sure you will win the gold slipper.' A leading artist from Jacksonville, Fla., sends his best wishes for my success and says: 'I hope you will win the slipper.' Hosts of Tennesseans say, 'Your foot is an ideal model, perfectly proportioned.'

'My feet are perfectly flexible and the toes are straight, well formed and not the least misshapen, and are pink, too. The instep is high and well arched. I am tall but well proportioned. My exact height is 5 feet 5½ inches. I have always been extremely fond of walking and have often walked both up and down Lookout Mountain, which stands 1,800 feet above the city of Chattanooga.'

The letter from Miss Ervin is only one of a great many which have been received from hopeful and much complimented contestants. There are others, however, whose photographs have not been published, but whose beautiful feet have been greatly admired by the judges in the contest.

Contestants who have not already done so, but who desire to enter the contest for the solid gold slipper, should read the instructions published three Sundays ago and mail their foot measurements and photos to

Opium-Morphine Cocaine Habit

The Only Cure for the disease that is effected without pain or suffering, in the privacy of home, and without detention from business.

For eighteen years I have practiced solely as a Specialist in the cure of those afflicted with the Opium Morphine, Cocaine and other drug habits. During those years I have been continually established at the same place. In all these years I have done a much larger business, entirely as a result of the cures I have effected, than have all other drug specialists combined. My practice now extends both every State of the Union as well as many foreign countries.

During the eighteen years of my professional life I have never advertised my patients have been my sole advertisement. This is the first time I have ever advertised, and that I do so now is solely at the solicitation of many of the patients whom I have treated and cured. They have urged upon me that it is my plain duty that I owe to mankind in general as well as to the afflicted, who are addicted to the Opium Morphine or other drug habits. Owing to their importunities, I have consented to advertise.

My method of treatment for the drug habit is recognized by the medical profession, and many of my patients are sent to me by physicians who confess their themselves powerless to cure. I have never seen a case of the drug habit that was in the least severe. I use no harsh or severe methods, but by a treatment which is entirely harmless. The patients take it in the privacy of home, thus avoiding all publicity. It is no better also to attend to business while taking the cure than while taking the drug. There is never any sickness, prostration or suffering as a result of the treatment. To a few of the patients, friends of the patient, both of the medical profession from the very beginning of my treatment, I have published a little book entitled "The Opium, Morphine, Cocaine Habit and Its Cure." This book will be sent FREE to any address upon request. Address DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, 1?? to 1?? Life Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Saw Inside His Own Head While Being Electrocuted.

ABRAHAM FRANK, a traveling photographer [illegible] city recovering from the effects of an experience worthy of [illegible] among the most weird and fantastic stories of Edgar Allan Poe. The world of science has already been enriched by his description of the sensations a person has while being electrocuted.

Frank is thirty-six years old, and has been traveling for conveyancing for [illegible] the suburban towns of Paris. His photographic outfit is carried in a small conveyance operated by him. When down duty for a studio, developing room, living room and [illegible]. As a rule the photographer travels in company with his wife, but on a recent trip to Argenteuil, a suburb of Paris, a family night at the country fairs held at regular intervals in the little towns surrounding Paris.

A few weeks ago there was an indoor fair on the Boulevard Richard Lenoir in the suburban town of Montreuil. Frank was there in company with several other traveling shows.

Living all alone in the Rue St. Maude, No. 20, in Montreuil, there was an eccentric old man named Ardouin. During his early life he had been a cavalry soldier and later a showman. Frank had traveled around with him for years, and the two were good friends. After retiring from the road Ardouin devoted all his spare time to the study of electricity. His home was wired from cellar to garret. Every room contained numerous electrical batteries and other contrivances in a more or less workable condition. The old soldier's neighbors frequently saw blue sheets of flame darting from room to room at night. They said Ardouin was a madman, and they shunned both him and his house.

Ardouin heard that his old travelling companion, the photographer, was at the Montreuil fair, so he went there to see him. Frank promised to return the visit on that very evening. Ardouin also was anxious to show him a wonderful photographic trick apparatus, which he explained he had just received from the United States. The old soldier said it was destined to create a sensation when exhibited publicly.

When Frank arrived at the Rue St. Maude that night his friend conducted him into the house, opening outward. In the hall were three long a number of copper wires, with loops of brass for the hands and feet and a metal cap for the head.

Ardouin explained to the photographer what the box was for. The subject, he said, was first to fit his hands and feet and head into the brass loops and cap. Then when a mild current was turned on the body became both luminous and transparent and could be photographed. In that way Ardouin said it was vastly superior to X-ray photography, and was bound to create a most tremendous sensation.

Suspecting nothing, the photographer said he would like to test the apparatus himself. So he stepped into the box and slipped his hands and feet into the loops and fitted the brass cap on his head.

Then Ardouin shut the door of the box and said he would turn on a very mild current and let his friend see the wonderful effect.

The next moment the brass loops tightened around Frank's arms and legs, holding them apart in a vice-like grip, so that it was impossible for him to move.

"What are you doing? What are you doing? Let me go!" he shouted in great alarm as it suddenly dawned upon him that he had been trapped.

The old showman laughed diabolically in reply and turned on the electric current.

Frank received a violent shock and began to suffer most excruciating pain.

"I tried to scream," the photographer declares in his statement dictated to the police, "but my tongue seemed to have gone completely down my throat. My teeth crushed one against the other so that I thought they would all be ground to powder. I felt as though a procession of needles, tickles and red hot bullets was racing along my limbs and through my body from head to foot and back again. A hundred small hammers seemed to be hitting me all over. My brain boiled, that is the only way I can express it, and my poor head was lighted up on the inside. There was a distinct luminous glow inside my head. I saw it.

"I really believe that during those awful minutes I saw the inside of my own head. My eyes seemed directed inwardly, for at the time I saw nothing but blue channels and throbbing, palpitating veins, with a monstrous mass of yellowish-gray corrugations.

"Gradually the strain became less intense, and at length it ceased. For a moment I was relieved, but I soon realized to live. Then the door of the booth opened and Ardouin appeared. His eyes were glaring with the light of madness. In one hand he held an open razor and a white pitcher. In the other was a revolver.

"'Your pardon, Frank,' he said, bowing low at the door. 'I simply turned on the current for a moment or two to make sure that it was in perfect working order. Now, with your kind permission, I wish to state that fate has selected you as an honored instrument for the further enlightenment of science. I want to prove that it is possible to restore the dead to life by injecting fresh electrified blood into the veins. I know it can be done and I have been waiting for a long time to demonstrate it. With this razor I shall open one of your veins, my dear friend, and as your blood streams out I will turn on the current full force and catch your electrified blood in this pitcher. For the success of the experiment it will be necessary to cause you to cease to live, but it will be only for a few minutes, because I shall presently restore you to life by injecting your blood into your veins once more. I have selected this plate to kill you with after tapping your vein, because shooting is the quickest and most painless of all deaths.'

"As the madman approached with his razor I made a desperate effort and wrenched my feet free. Then I begged Ardouin as he attempted to pacify me and in the struggle which followed the booth overturned and we fell. The madman was beneath me and although he fought viciously I at last managed to tear the razor and revolver out of his hands while he was bearing me over the head with the broken pitcher.

"After throwing aside the old soldier's murderous weapons I secured him by fastening his head against the floor. Then I ran from the house and fell exhausted in the street. When I awoke I was in the hospital here with my head bandaged. They tell me I had been out in a dozen places."

M. Garnier, the police commissionnaire at Montreuil, proceeded to the old showman's house with two deputies after receiving a report of the case. They found the doors barricaded and had to force their way in.

In the garret they found Ardouin lying dead on the floor with a small-calibre bullet hole in his side.

MRS. OSBORN ON BLOUSES AND THE SEPARATE WAIST

The separate blouse is either very plain or extravagantly elaborate. White is the most popular color for separate blouses.

Separate blouses that match the dress in color are very smart.

China silk is the smartest fabric for the business woman's blouse, and this should be white.

Stocks without bows the latest fad for shirtwaists.

I SUPPOSE that very few persons know that I was the originator of what is known as the shirt waist, a garment which has gone through many evolutions and which has become an indispensable part of every woman's wardrobe.

I think that fifteen years ago or thereabouts the shirt waist was an unknown garment. At that time tennis was in fashionable, if not more so than it is now, and I played tennis a great deal and always envied the men their comfortable negligee shirts for tennis playing, because we women were then fastened up in tightly fitting basques and waists, and real enjoyment of outdoor sports was impracticable. I began thinking over what would be suitable and comfortable to wear when playing tennis, and decided that I must have a shirt patterned after the ones worn by the young men. So I went to a very smart shirtmaker—who is noted in that line to-day—and got him to make me a simple, loose negligee shirt with a little pocket in it, just like a man's. It was the first woman's shirt this man had ever made, but he has made millions since then.

My tennis shirt at once became the fad among other women, who gladly welcomed a loose and comfortable garment for outdoor sports, and the man who made mine took what them out and added attractions to them as the years went by, and the shirt waist became less and less mannish and more dainty until it has become one of the most attractive garments that we have, although still loose and comfortable.

The first shirt waist was a plain flannel garment, but the last one is a mass of soft lace and fichus and is called a blouse, because it is too elaborate to bear the old name with dignity

In Summer these pretty waists are made more simply than in Winter, and of materials that will wash. These same waists are being worn now by a great many women who like the daintiness and freshness of them, and realize that a washable garment is very healthful. The Winter blouses of other sorts are, on the contrary, so fine and fanciful that many of them will not even stand cleaning, and must be discarded when they become soiled. In any case they cannot be washed, but have to be cleaned, by no means an inexpensive process.

It is a fad of the season to have all the waists made by hand. The tucks are run with a needle and all the lace insertings and designs are put in by hand. The embroidery, too, is done by hand or else applied so as to look like hand work. Even flannel and merino waists, which are quite simple as well as popular, are stitched by hand.

Everything Must Smart, Handiwork and Needlework.

These waists are enriched by a band of hand embroidery in front. This single decoration is more favored than the fashion of embroidering the cuffs and collar to match the fronts. An outer collar of Irish lace, with cuffs to match, is worn, or a turn-over collar and cuffs finish off the neck and sleeves.

White merino is a favorite material for the making of blouses of the plainer sort for morning wear, and probably the most popular smart model in this soft and serviceable fabric is made in a manner so simple that one would have to see it worn to realize how suitable and fetching the garment can look.

This blouse is made with three tucks on each side the front and finished with a round collar, like that on a small boy's shirt, with buttonholes in the fronts of the collar. Through each hole is drawn a soft black silk tie. The sleeves are loose, but not full, and the plain cuffs have buttonless slits, through which are drawn soft black silk ends which knot and hang, each end being tipped by a pendant of braid passementerie. Underneath the neckband is one of lace, made small and to fit about the wrist. This dainty little thing may be taken out and washed and it preserves the cuffs from soiling or wearing out rapidly. In the neck is a little chemisette of lace which can be taken out and cleaned as often as is necessary.

Another fashionable style of waist is the white wash blouse of soft French muslin, embroidered by hand and trimmed with Valenciennes lace put in to form graceful patterns.

Even smarter than the dainty white blouses are those of velvet or mirror velvet for morning wear, made in the same shade of color as the skirt and finished with a lace chemisette and cuffs. For these linen lace cuffs are preferred. Both chemisette and cuffs are merely tacked in place and do not form part of the garment.

What Is Newest and Smartest in Shirt Waists.

One way in which these simple blouses are finished is with two rows of buttons with a criss-cross of silk braid in front, and another smart style is to work three large round buttonholes on each side the top of the blouse and lace the front with a soft silk scarf through these.

With outdoor suits, consisting of a coat and skirt, necessitating a bodice of some other material, soft blouses are worn, made of crepe de chine or liberty satin, and these come under the head of those which are too elaborate to stand washing or, sometimes, any kind of cleaning.

For business women I do not think anything is smarter than dainty blouses of white China silk. These wash better than blouses made of ordinary wash fabrics, and always look pretty and fresh. The color goes with anything else, and the fact that they have constantly to be laundered prevents any gathering of unhealthy microbes; for a business woman must travel on crowded cars, and her clothing, more than that of other women, should be of a kind that may be frequently and readily cleaned.

The popular way in which to make these China silk waists is with a lot of little tucks or else with four large ones on each side, the front and back. Large tucks are smartest when stitched down a fourth of an inch from the edges, and great care should be taken in making tucks on blouses to see that they turn outward instead of inward. In the latter case one is sure to come to grief, for, in some inaccountable manner, blouses immediately wear out or "grin" under and about the armholes when tucks are turned inward.

Another word of caution about the simple blouse: Don't have the sleeves big! A much better effect is produced by not putting too much material in the sleeves. A shirt waist is usually worn with short skirt, which makes big sleeves out of place and a most ridiculous, and the garment itself is of a character to which large sleeves do not belong. Sleeves should be just comfortably loose and full, never large and voluminous. Fancy blouses, on the contrary, straight stock, and very wisely, for that are made with fancy sleeves, but in the sort of finish to the neck is most appropriate when one indulges in outdoor sports or indoor games which necessitate the wearing of a loose, plain blouse. But instead of the ties so frequently worn would suggest a turnover, worn without the stock worn with it. The athletic woman will never give up her plain, any how. Generally speaking, a plain stock, and cuffs, without any bow or tie, are much smarter on a blouse than any other style of neckwear.

A—Smart, extravagant blouse, embroidered in Egyptian designs in shades of yellow.

B—Fetching blouse, of cream colored batiste and Valenciennes lace, with tabs of heavy open lace.

C—Simple, chic blouse of cashmere with square lace yoke.

D—Elaborate blouse of silk mull, lace and colored silk embroidery.

E—Popular chic crepe de chine blouse, elaborated with embroidery and lace.

In the way of elaborate blouses figure A shows a wonderfully original design in Egyptian lines, the decorations receiving decided taste from the color of the embroidery, which is worked in orange and gold. The yoke is very deep in front, and is all one piece with the wide top of the sleeves. It curves down the front and upon the top of each shallow in the back and is quite full blouse is put on this with a thick cord of the material. The front has four panels, outlining a small square yoke of heavy white lace finished with a stock of the same. Medium full sleeves terminate in a deep shirred cuff of white lace.

If Cleopatra ever wore a shirt waist one would imagine it to be something on the order of this, with its wing decorations in deep orange colored linen, embroidered in white and outlined in gold, and with the supplementary decorations worked in orange and gold and put on in a real Egyptian fashion.

Between the neck of the blouse and its stock is a narrow band of open lace and full sleeves are finished with a sort of double cuff, the lower one of which is fitted and fastens in the back. Four or five tiny tucks finish the top of the shaped cuff.

In figure B one sees a fetching example of a blouse made of cream colored batiste and white Valenciennes lace. To a small round yoke and stock of rows of Valenciennes lace is attached a band of wool batiste, embroidered with small floral designs and French knots in white silk. The front panel is done with double lines of thick gold embroidery, having large gold dots between the lines. The lower edge of the front panel, and a greater number on each side the fastenings in the back.

YOU CAN EASILY MAKE FOUR PERFECT SQUARES WITH THEM BUT CAN YOU MAKE ONLY THREE?

Carefully cut out the eight pieces of bamboo. Four of them are twice as long as the other four.

Then see if you can arrange them on the table in such a way that they form three perfect squares. It is easy to form four squares with them. The puzzle, though, is to form only three.

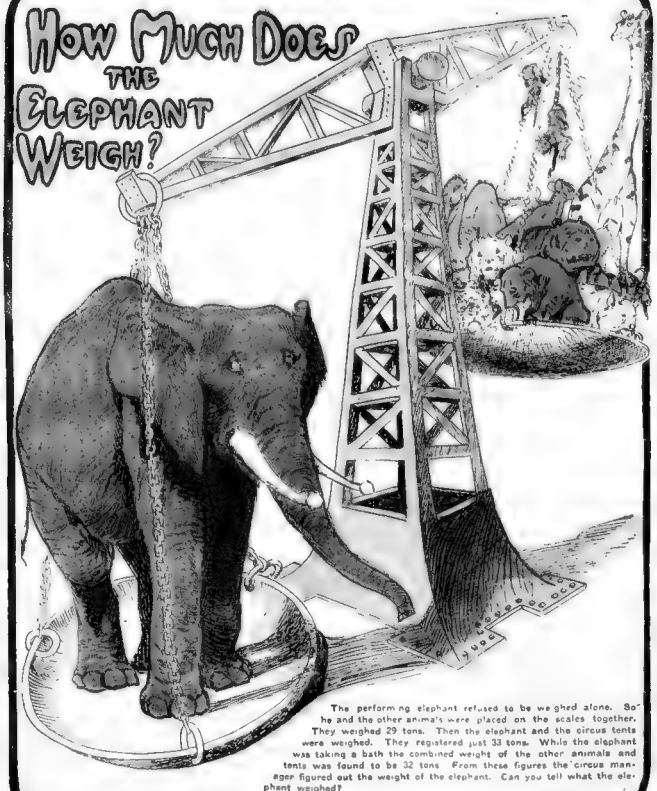
HOW MUCH DOES THE ELEPHANT WEIGH?



The performing elephant refused to be weighed alone. So he and the other animals were placed on the scales together. They weighed 29 tons. Then the elephant and the circus tents were weighed. They registered just 33 tons. While the elephant was taking a bath the combined weight of the other animals and tents was found to be 32 tons. From these figures the circus manager figured out the weight of the elephant. Can you tell what the elephant weighed?

Young Women Advised to Start a Post-Romance Happiness Fund

Must young women to-day are doing all in their power to make themselves attractive to men, that they may win a prize in matrimonial lottery, just as they have done since the beginning of time.

Realizing that the average man in civilized society admires the well-dressed woman, whatever he may say to the contrary, she has learned the power of dress and extravagance for men, and she has learned that complexion and hair and teeth and form depend upon her wardrobe.

The woman who is a queen of nature's creation, as she should be, is also a queen of her mental accomplishments, for she knows that she has will to attractive social A little knowledge of [illegible] are to help her pass the time [illegible] for conversation, a little education, for social success and a good deal of tact and a little "sport" to make her [illegible] and she has a well equipped for the romantic campaign.

John Drew's Philosophy of Life

by Eleanor Ames

John Drew Is a Student of Human Nature, But Gives Up the Riddle of Womankind

I read a great deal. I'm very fond of reading. What? Oh, I'm catholic in my tastes, fo-

He Believes in Cordiality, Contentment, Frankness and no Worry.

By Eleanor Ames.

IF a dynamite bomb had been exploded in the business office of the Hollis Street Theatre, it would scarcely have caused more consternation than did my calm and modest announcement that I would like to interview John Drew.

Mr. Frohman looked forward and looked sideways into my face and then looked inquiringly at Mr. Rich, who drew near and looked me over.

"I would like to interview Mr. Drew," I repeated quietly.

It brought speech to their tongues at any rate.

"She wants to interview Mr. Drew," said Mr. Rich to Mr. Frohman, and then he left the scene.

Mr. Frohman came forward. He smiled indulgently. It was as though his mind repeated, "She is harmless, poor thing. We will deal with her gently."

He spoke his words upward with a precedent air.

"My dear young woman," he said, "it is practically impossible to see Mr. Drew in person. He is very busy, and he is never interviewed."

"Then I really must interview him," I persisted, and settled myself very comfortably as though I intended to make a long visit.

Mr. Frohman looked worried. Then he became interested.

"I will see what can be done," he said, "but mind you, I don't promise success. Many, many times he has been approached by interviewers, but he has always refused to see them. He will very likely do the same to you."

"You can never tell until you try," I suggested.

"Quite true," he agreed.

So I waited, while he went away to see if he could make a path for me to Mr. Drew's dressing room.

He was gone several minutes. My hope rose steadily as time passed. It doesn't take Mr. John Drew [illegible] to refuse to see a reporter, I said to myself. I may be here [illegible] to see Mr. Drew.

At the entrance to the reception room I met Mr. Frohman. He wore a [illegible] and I beamed with pleasure.

"He will see you," he announced. "He will see you, but remember you are not to [illegible] interview with him. Mr. Drew is a very busy man, and he is not interviewed. Remember that."

I promised.

He led me through the [illegible] to the door of Mr. Drew's dressing room. He opened the door and announced me.

Mr. Drew was standing before a mirror with his back to the door. He was in his shirt sleeves, and he was brushing his hair. He looked at me in the mirror as I entered.

He smiled gravely. He took my hand and bowed over it with the [illegible] of a courtier.

"I am delighted to meet you, Miss Ames," he said. "Please be seated. I am at your service."

He waved me to a chair and I sat down. He turned to the mirror and continued brushing his hair.

"I am very glad to meet you," he said, "but I am afraid I cannot help you much in your interview. I am not interesting. I never do anything interesting. I am a very commonplace person."

REVOLUTION!

Bloodshed Is Feared To-day

Czar Nicholas and His Winter Palace.

Army of 500,000 Workmen, Led by Priest, Determined to See Czar at the Winter Palace.

Thousands of Rifles Are to Be Pointed Upon the Intruders

St. Petersburg Jan 21. With the prospect of an army of nearly half a million workmen led by a priest marching to the Winter Palace of the Czar, demanding that he receive in person their petition for recognition of their rights, Russia faces a crisis as grave as that which preceded the French Revolution.

The authorities have issued proclamations warning the striking workmen from assembling in force. The workmen have disregarded these orders, and boldly announce that they will march on the Winter Palace at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The police of Israel with soldiers and the buildings in the vicinity have been converted into barracks so that thousands of rifles will point toward the revolutionists to-morrow.

It is realized in St. Petersburg that it is revolution and not mere rioting which confronts the Russian government. The throne of the Romanoffs is assailed.

City Like a Beleaguered Stronghold.

The city to-night presents the appearance of a beleaguered place. The military is in complete possession. Troops line the streets. Galloping squadrons of cavalry are seen everywhere. The courtyards contain gendarme, and cordons of police and Cossacks surround the closed mills and factories.

George Gopon the priest, who is the leader of the revolutionists, will be at the head of the great procession. Then they demand the presence of the Czar to-morrow. He believes that there will be bloodshed. He thinks it is necessary to enfranchise Russia. He is quoted as saying:

"I shall stand at the front, as behooves a leader, and if they shoot us down I shall be the first to fall. But our blood will accomplish more than the most successful agitation."

Gopon Is Idealized by the Populace.

Gopon is idolized by the populace. They will go where he wills. He will lead them to the palace and demand that the Czar appear and answer them.

These striking workmen have been refused any recognition whatsoever

MUNICIPAL PERIL GAS ORDER LIKE PAGE NOW LAW. GIRLS?

Measure Passed by Joint Branches of City Council Went in Force at Midnight.

Mrs. Freeman Richmond Here Also Received Word Her Brother Was Hurt.

WILD, I SIGNATURE OF MAYOR COLLINS

STRANGE COINCIDENCE HAS COME TO LIGHT

Must Be Adopted by Next Year's Council to Enable People to Vote Upon It.

Man With Broken Nose Twice Asked for Boston Woman With Story.

PROGRESS IN FIGHT FOR 80-CENT RATE

HAPPENED DAY BEFORE MABEL PAGE MURDER

At midnight last night the order passed by both branches of the City Council authorizing the mayor of Boston to fix the price of gas at $1.00 per 1,000 feet became law without the signature of the Mayor.

The order which was introduced at the last meeting of the city Council by Councilman McCall, provides:

That the city of Boston become authorized to enter into a contract with the provisions of Chapter 714 of the Revised Laws of Massachusetts to erect, purchase or lease and maintain within its limits, one or more plants for the manufacture or distribution of gas and electricity for furnishing light for municipal use, and light, heat and power, except for the operation of electric cars for the use of the inhabitants.

At the next meeting on January 9, this order was passed in the Common Council by a vote of 20 to 7. The board of Aldermen concurred by a vote of 7 to 3.

Must be Passed Next Year.

On the eleventh of January, after securing an opinion from the corporation counsel to do so this day in the matter, the two boards met in joint convention with Mayor Collins for his consideration. Under the law all acts must be approved or vetoed by the mayor before they can legally go into effect. At midnight last night Mayor Collins had taken no action upon the measure, so it became a law.

It was feared early this Hill that Mayor Collins had not signed the bill. At the city hall this morning the gas order was the only topic discussed.

It is in effect that the order shall be passed next year, that it shall be submitted to the people of Boston. There are two methods by which the Legislature affects municipal ownership of gas and electricity. One is under the general laws, and the other by special acts.

It is the purpose of Boston to show great interest in the matter. It has not been decided as to whether the Mayor is to be authorized to appoint a commission to act in the matter, or whether the city council will do the work. There are many questions of policy and purpose which will have to be settled. It is likely that a petition will be presented to the Legislature asking for the passage of an act authorizing the city of Boston to manufacture gas and electricity for municipal purposes. Whether they will do so or not is doubtful.

Profit in Eighty-Cent Gas.

The action of the council has been agitated for a long time, but only within the last few weeks of late owing to the ongoing out of the legislature with the fact that a new law, which, by the consequent postponement of the hearings on the BOSTON AMERICAN petition for eighty cent gas, will not be in session on the 1st of January, 1906, as was originally intended.

During those days Mayor Edward W. Hatch of Newton, who is also a candidate for Governor, and His Honor Mayor Hibbard of Somerville, have been on the witness stand, and Attorney Morton Proctor Hough, counsel for the petitioners for the high service, Professor Arthur Edward Kennedy and other experts that experts could be able to give the city the evidence in the ability of the Boston companies to even approximately manage to sell gas to the public for 80 cents, under the terms of the law as it now stands.

Resumption of Hearings.

To-morrow the joint committee of consumers of gas of East Boston will be heard and on Monday will continue the hearings in Charlestown. It is for the remainder of the week will continue the hearings on the several stations of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

There are before committee Dugan, two communications suggesting to him that it would be well to give a hearing to the mission to discuss the hearings in her district, and that it would be well to give the Legislature less business, opportunity to act upon the various matters pending by amendment or repeal of the act. Many citizens of the district are anxious to express the hope that the governor will accept the resignation of these three gentlemen.

There is a great feeling on the part of the citizens of Boston against being forced into electric gas. Still so, that they would look for assistance from the new legislature

SHE WAS AWAY.

The message was brought to Mrs. Freeman Richmond's house by a well-dressed, powerful man, with a broken nose. Investigation quickly showed the story to be false. The next day Mrs. Freeman Richmond was startled to hear of the murder of Miss Mabel Page in Weston, with the accompanying story of the dress message which had been given to Miss Page about her brother Harold Page, having been hurt.

Mrs. Freeman Richmond was at the house of her father, F. J. Freeman of No. 23 Wellington street, when the message was received at her own apartments in her family, Miss Edith Nason. To increase the mystery, Mrs. Freeman Richmond had not been called to the door of her father's apartment by an unknown man, a mysterious stranger with a broken nose answering the description of the man who left the message about her brother at her own house. This stranger was looking for a broken nose. He has summarily disappeared.

In the same building at No. 23 Wellington street lives a family named Tucker, whose name is conspicuously displayed on a plate card at the door bell. This Tucker family is in no way related to the Andrew P. Tuckers.

MATTER KEPT QUIET.

The whole matter makes a puzzle which Mrs. Freeman Richmond has vainly tried to solve. She and her people kept the strictest secret regarding accounts and thinking, they would throw any light on the Page mystery.

Mrs. Freeman Richmond is the wife of Harry B. Richmond, a bookkeeper at No. 23 Washington street. She is a fair, quiet-haired young woman, of medium height with a pretty face and pleasing manners. She is known and admired as a patient, gentle woman, who will not intrude her affairs on any one. Miss Edith Nason, as it was stated, is not that she has ever been connected with A BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. She is employed at No. 23 Washington street, her father's place of business.

"This is a very puzzling matter, March 20," said Mrs. Freeman Richmond this afternoon. "I went to the speak-easy [illegible] was called to the door this morning by a knock. There was no one there. I looked around, but saw no one. I thought it was a joke. I went back to my work. I finally forgot about it."

STATE BATTERED AT TUCKER ALIBI; NEW PIN WAS SURPRISE

ALL EVIDENCE IN; MOTHER AGAIN ON STAND.

"ROBBERY AS MOTIVE BROKEN DOWN, PIN IS ELIMINATED," SAYS MR. VAHEY

By James H. Vahey, Senior Counsel for Charles L. Tucker.

We have, we believe, clearly established the fact that Charles L. Tucker is innocent that he could not have murdered Mabel Page. The pin found in Tucker's pocket, and alleged to have belonged to the dead woman, has been eliminated from the case.

The contradictory evidence of Amy Roberts at the Waltham hearing and at the trial has broken down the motive of robbery given by the State for the crime. Tucker's alibi has been invulnerable to the attacks of the prosecution.

CONNOLLY AND DOYLE POINTS OF ATTACK.

The testimony [illegible] Charles L. Tucker, charged with the murder of Mabel Page, was closed in the Superior criminal court this afternoon before 1 o'clock. A number of witnesses were called to-day by counsel for the defendant, and [illegible] witnesses to former statements made by witnesses for the prosecution. Among the witnesses called by the defense was Assistant District Attorney Bancroft of the Cascabel [illegible].

In reply to the evidence of several witnesses, Section Foreman [illegible] Cutter, Engineer Dolan, Fireman George Dunn, Lineman [illegible] Stand, and [illegible] Cutter, [illegible] Tucker left East Newton about 8:30 o'clock on the morning of March 23, and [illegible] Tucker was at his home in Auburndale at 9:30 o'clock on the morning of the murder.

Charles Cutter, Connolly's employer, was called to the stand and testified that Connolly had [illegible] a man pass the corner on the day of the murder, but that he did not know that it was Tucker or not. The testimony of Engineer Dolan was to the effect that Tucker was at his home in Auburndale at 9:30 o'clock on the morning of the murder. Dolan testified that he did not know whether Tucker left Auburndale shortly after 9:30 o'clock or not.

NEW PIN IN CASE.

The closing of the case for the defense came when Mr. Vahey introduced the new pin that had been found in the possession of Tucker. The introduction of the pin was made by the photograph of Coroner Leary, who took one of a group of the articles in a part in the cup of Tucker's pocket. The pin appeared. Most of the witnesses who testified that Tucker had found the pin apparently believed that the pin in the picture, which Dr. Leary brought to Mr. Vahey's office, was the pin which Tucker had found in his pocket.

ATTACK ON ALIBI.

Charles B. Cutter, who lives on East Newton street, Weston, was the first witness in rebuttal offered by the prosecution.

"Do you know Daniel Connolly?"

"Yes, I've known him for many years, he lives next door to me."

Connolly gave the alibi that he was engaged in doing chores around the house on the morning of the murder. Cutter testified that he did not see Connolly on the morning of the murder, but that he did see Tucker. Cutter's description of Tucker was that he was a man of slender build and that he was dressed in dark clothes. Cutter testified that he did not see Tucker with a bundle in his hand.

HE SAID SAW TUCKER.

"Do you know Daniel Connolly, and did you ever talk with him about seeing the defendant Tucker on the day of the murder?" "Yes; Mr. Connolly said he saw him on East Newton street. I asked him if he saw him turn the corner, and he told me that he did not see him on the corner, but only noticed him on East Newton street."

"When was this conversation?" "Before the hearing at Waltham."

Mr. Vahey, on cross-examination, asked: "You understood him to say, before the hearing at Waltham, that he had seen Tucker on East Newton street, and you understood what he meant perfectly well?" "Yes."

"And you didn't have any doubt about it being the day after and he didn't have any doubt, but you were both talking about the 31st day of March?" "Yes, we were talking about the day on which the murder occurred."

The witness was then excused.

WATCH WRONG?

State Detective Ellis Nealand, and District Attorney Bancroft, testified that on June 13 he had gone to Ridgeway road, and where Dan of Connolly was at work, and interviewed him. He was accompanied by General Whitney. People for the defense, Connolly, Mr. Rhoades said, declared that the watch might have been wrong on March 31.

"Where did he say he was on that day?" "About this, just from the east corner of East Newton street and South avenue." "Was Dan? Connolly?" "Yes."

"But he said he was further down on the street?" "He said he thought he was coming out of Mr. Bennett's yard."

"Did you tell him that [illegible]?" "I wrote it all down."

On cross-examination by Mr. Vahey the witness acknowledged that he did not remember [illegible] Connolly's watch was wrong, but that [illegible] Connolly that day.

"Did [illegible] Connolly that day?" "Yes."

"Didn't [illegible] Connolly that day?" "I don't know."

"Didn't you know that General Whitney had left [illegible] Mr. Connolly?" "Yes."

"You mean to say that General Whitney did not tell you that he had?" "He did not."

"Didn't [illegible] you saw him on the 31st of March?" "I don't [illegible] Connolly that day."

"Why, [illegible]?" "I [illegible] it."

"Didn't you [illegible]?" "I don't know."

"Didn't you know that [illegible] Connolly that day?" "I don't know

Where has anything been proven against him?

How has he been in any way implicated in the death of poor Mabel Page?

Put one what has been done for him

[illegible] was the most important thing against him

Many than that, his whole day that 31st of March has been accounted for.

Pieces have been told, truthfully, where he went, what he did, where he was at different moments all durling the day. Nothing has been hidden. I am just as sure that I shall have him home with me next week as I am that I am alive

He feels sure, too

"Nothing Else Can Happen."

We all feel that nothing else can happen.

Everyone must see that he is innocent now that they know all the facts in the case.

It has been the victim of circumstances and a great mistake has been made a mistake which has caused my son and his entire family more suffering than any one can possibly realize.

I could have died a thousand deaths, it seems to me, and yet not have suffered as I have for the past ten months.

No record that my mind has not been nearly crazed with grief and now I am [illegible] with agony.

Only a mother can know what I have gone through

To my son, a boy whom I have loved and cared for as I have for Louis, to be torn away from his home, shut up in prison, and then set on trial for his life accused of a fearful dead which he never did—do you know what it is to me?

No, you do not, thank heaven, and I pray that you never may know.

Were it in my power I would spare any woman the anguish I have known. But it is not. I share who have suffered.

Louis's father has shared all my heart aches. And perhaps it has been worse for him than for me, as he has not very good health.

I have feared at times that he would be unable to endure till the end. Many days he has been at the court when he has been so weak that he trembled [illegible]

The great strain of the actual trial is lessened, but the terrible suspense [illegible] we can know the jury's decision is growing all the time [illegible] to me we can scarcely wait to hear the verdict

Each hour is a day and each minute an hour

Confident, But Anxious.

I am confident who would lack in confidence when she knows her son's [illegible] but I am anxious.

I want my boy with me once more

I want to get away from all the dreadful strain of this suspicion and [illegible] cast upon my son and the suspense we have all had to undergo.

I [illegible] to go back to my peaceful little home and have my son with me. I try to put from me this fearful affair away from us.

I never knows what one can endure until the time comes, but it does [illegible] now that I could ever again live through such a year as the [illegible]

I say for all of us that we are satisfied with our case, and we feel [illegible] of the result. We are all prepared to give Louis a hearty welcome [illegible]

THE BEST FRIENDS OF PE-RU-NA ARE THE MOTHERS AND CHILDREN

When Sickness Comes to the Little Ones

It Is the Mother Who Chiefly Suffers

She suffers even more than the child who happens to be sick

Her sympathy is deeper than that of any other member of the family.

The mothers look forward with dread to the torrid heat of summer, thinking of their children and the many pitfalls to disease that are before them

Spring and summer are sure to bring ailments, especially among the little folks.

It does not take a mother very long to discover that Peruna is the best friend she has in time of illness among the children.

The doctors may come and go with their different theories and constant change of remedies.

The doctor of years ago gave entirely different remedies than he does today.

Each year finds some change in his prescriptions and in the drugs he relies upon

A Multitude of Mothers

Have discovered that Peruna is the stand-by, and that in all the ailments of spring and summer to which the children are subjected, Peruna is the remedy that will most quickly relieve

Whether it is spring fever or stomach derangement, whether it is indigestion or bowel disease, a catarrhal congestion of the mucous surfaces is the cause.

Peruna quickly relieves this condition of the mucous membranes. Its operation is prompt, the children do not dislike to take the medicine, it has no deleterious effects in any part of the body

It simply removes the cause of the disagreeable symptoms and restores the health

Peruna is not a physic. Peruna is not a nervine nor a narcotic. Peruna does not produce any drug habit, however long it may be taken. Peruna is not a stimulant.

Peruna is a specific remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

The mothers all over the United States are the best friends that Peruna has.

The Mothers Hold Pe-ru-na in High Esteem,

Not only because it has cured them of their various ailments, but because it never has proven the children's sufferings and grasp of catarrhal diseases.

We have in our files bushels of testimonials from mothers whose children have been cured by Peruna. However, the large majority of mothers who use Peruna, we never hear from.

But we do hear from a great number of mothers who are overjoyed at some special good they have received from Peruna that they cannot restrain their enthusiasm. They are anxious to share these benefits with other mothers.

Would Not Be Without Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Anna McSweeney, 236 N. 8th St., Kansas City, Kan., writes:

"I would not for anything do without Peruna in the house.

"It is a safeguard against colds, for I have given it to my children and they are in the best of health.

"My little daughter, Catherine, the one you have been treating, had such an appetite that I enjoy watching her eat."

The Benefit Which the Children of the United States Have Received from Pe-ru-na Can Never Be Put Into Words.

The chronic ailments it has prevented, the suffering it has mitigated, will never be fully revealed

But at least this much can be said, that the coming generation owes a great debt to Peruna, for it is in the tender years of youth that slight ailments are liable to develop into lasting diseases, thus blasting the whole career of the individual.

The mothers who are bringing up their children to-day to believe in Peruna are doing a great work for humanity

These children brought up to believe in Peruna from the start, will, when they become heads of families, themselves use Peruna with unquestioning faith.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household.

As soon as the value of Peruna is appreciated by every household, both as a preventive and cure, tens of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of thousands of chronic, lingering cases of catarrh will be prevented

Mrs. Theresa Rooke, 5 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., Secretary Ladies of the Maccabees, writes:

"In our home Peruna is the only medicine we have. Grandmother, mother, father and child, all have used Peruna. It is our great remedy for catarrh of the stomach and head, colds, and female complaints of which it has cured me.

"We find it of great value when my husband becomes worn out or catches cold. A couple of doses cure him.

"If the baby has colic, or any stomach disorders, a dose or two cure her. "I consider Peruna finer than any doctor's medicine that I have ever tried, and I know that as long as we have it in the house, we will all be able to keep in good health."—Theresa Rooke.

No Doctor Required.

Mr. Edward Otto, 827 De Soto street, St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"I cannot say enough for Peruna. It has done great work in my family, especially for my oldest boy. We had doctored with three or four different doctors and they did not seem to do him any good.

"We gave up hopes of cure, and as did they, but we pulled him through on Peruna.

"We had several doctors and they said they could do no more for him, so we tried Peruna as a last resort, and that did the work. Since then we keep it in the house all the time, and no doctor is required."—Edward Otto.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna I so found in so many homes is because there is no danger in the administration of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without fear of acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for years. It is always ready when

Mr. G. H. Farmer, New Marthaville, La., writes:

"Our little son, Harry, is well and healthy now, and we think it was on account of the Peruna you directed us, he will keep his health and grow strong.

"We know that our little son's life was saved by your wonderful medicine, Peruna, and we shall always praise Peruna and use it in our family when needed.

"Should we have any more catarrhal trouble in our family, we shall always write to you for treatment." G. H. Farmer

Mr. Howard Andrew Sterner Muddy Creek, Pa., writes:

"I have Peruna in my house all the time. I would not be without it. It is good for children when they take a cold or croup. It cured my baby boy of croup very soon.

"I have introduced Peruna into six families since I procured your book last fall. Peruna combined my drugs of a year for me. I have seen relief already."

"In fact, I consider it a household blessing. I would not know how to raise my children without it. I am pleased to give it my recommendation." Amelia Sailer.

Bill to Stop Watering of Gas Trust Stock

ENDORSED by the United Improvement Associations of Boston, a bill was filed yesterday for introduction in the Legislature which, if passed, will limit the capital stock of the Gas Trust to the aggregate of the present capital of the consituent companies. It amends the fourth section of Chapter 417, of the Acts of 1903, so that it shall read:

The Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners shall have authority, for the purpose of acquiring the property, franchises, rights, licenses, powers, privileges and franchises of the several corporations mentioned in Section 1, to issue such an amount of capital stock as may be approved by the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners as being equal at par to the amount of capital stock now outstanding of the several corporations, and such an amount of bonds as may be approved by such board as being equal at par to the outstanding bonds of the several corporations; provided, however, that such Boston Consolidated Gas Company shall, upon the transfer and conveniance to it, as above act forth, assume and be responsable for all debts and liabilities of the several corporations mentioned in Section 1.

of some of these provisions is too apparent to need argument. The mere state[illegible] hearings on capitalization should be [illegible] with Industrials for being powerful [illegible] the possession of wealth, they [illegible]

Second Grievance and Remedy Therefor.

[illegible] light plants is provided for by chapter thirty-four of the Revised Laws of Massachusetts and approved of by you, as the following quotation from your inaugural indicates:

[illegible] ommend legislation giving to cities and towns wider powers in the conduct of business which derives its profits from the necessities of the community.

The powers already granted have proved the economy and wisdom of the conduct of such business by the commu[illegible]

Whatever doubt may exist as to the expediency of State or federal ownership [illegible] municipal lighting that under favorable conditions and proper management the business of gas electric lighting and water supply can be conducted by municipal corporations with profit to the inhabitants, both in price and in service.

Chapter 34 Mutilated.

Said Chapter 34, as passed by the Legislature after such mutilation as to render the act almost unrecognizable to those who made the original draft, nominally provides for public ownership, but under such conditions as to place the city under the necessity of paying by compulsory purchase more for existing plants and property than they are reasonably worth and then to sell for use in the manufacture and distribution of gas and electricity, as near under it as possible for the voters to accept a plant, making the municipal plant hinge upon the integrity or want of integrity of one or two men in the corporation.

Chapter 34 allows a city to acquire a gas plant without authority is given it by a two-thirds vote of such branch of the city council in two consecutive municipal years, and after such action has been approved by the voters at a special election, this to be followed by the filing by the Mayor in an open letter to our Legislature that he has taken the necessary steps to secure ownership of gas and electric plants by sending a special [illegible]

Suggestion to Mayor.

In order that two such votes of authority as [illegible] should be passed in the last week of [illegible] the first week of January, and in order that the necessity of ratification should be submitted to the voters at a special election, this can be done in an open letter to our Mayor suggesting that he take the necessary steps to secure ownership of gas and electric plants by sending a special [illegible]

Magic Foot Drafts possess the remarkable quality of absorbing from the blood the impurities which cause Rheumatism, curing where everything else has failed. They are even curing cases of "small 40 years' standing" [illegible] today. Magic Foot Draft Co., CX 22, Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill. Write for splendid new book on Rheumatism, sent free with the Drafts. Send no money—only your name. Write to-day.

How City Should Buy.

If required to purchase at all the city [illegible] should be required to purchase only such portion of the gas and electric plants as to the city may be reasonably necessary for the economical manufacture and distribution of gas and electricity," which is referred to the [illegible] I have above, copies of which will I hear [illegible] would be required to purchase from ten to fifteen millions, under my amendments. It would be required to purchase only a portion at a cost of not more than two million dollars, or if it choose it could, under the proposed amendments, build a sufficient plant for less than two million.

Third Grievance and Remedy Therefor

The Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners is chosen by the Governor one each year to serve a term of three years. It was originally intended and expected that its members would be representatives of the people and not the pliant tools of the gas companies. To whatever extent they may have become subservient to the will of the Gas Trust, it is an undeniable fact that the public has lost confidence in them. Their conduct in the locations now being held by them, as outlined in the first portion of this letter, with the disclosures made before them in the matter to [illegible] justifies the conclusion that at least two members of the board can better serve the people off rather than on it.

Bill to Abolish Board.

I have introduced a bill, a copy of which I send you, providing for the abolishment of the present board and providing for the election by the voters of the State of three commissioners at the next State election, one for a one year term, one for a two-year term and one for a three-year term, and providing that each year for a three year term, and providing for the appointment by the Governor and council of three members to hold office until the January after such election and qualification.

The board's duties require it to act in relation to and exclusively in every city and town in the State. The manner in which it has performed its duties in my opinion is every citizen than does the manner in which the Legislature and State [illegible] to form their duties.

Suggestions as to Governor's Course.

You promise to "treat with considerations all grievances of the people" and to "take the initiative in securing justice where real cause of complaint is found to exist."

I have stated the "grievances." I have shown that cause for complaint to exist. I have done all that I can do except ask you to take the [illegible] legislative remedies.

Our Mayor is wrapped in the courageous [illegible] of corporation silence. Both branches [illegible] But the Legislature will listen to you.

JANE TOPPAN, IN DEADLY FEAR OF POISON, STARVING IN MADHOUSE

CONFESSED SLAYER OF 31 PERSONS A SHADOW.

Blanche Wilson, Her Former Nurse at Taunton, Tells How Noted Prisoner Is Tortured by Dread of Death by Poison

Beseeching death to call her, yet afraid to die, starving, yet refusing to take food lest it be poisoned, Jane Toppan, the self-confessed poisoner of thirty-one persons, lies in a padded room in the infirmary at the Taunton Hospital.

Just two years ago Jane Toppan was the picture [illegible] her patients and was [illegible] singingly to [illegible] nurse. [illegible] going to write [illegible] them to expect [illegible] in an hour.

Then came [illegible] but was at first but glad [illegible] over her [illegible] and [illegible] there [illegible] former [illegible] lady, and a [illegible] a private [illegible] like [illegible] Miss [illegible] woman, who was [illegible] nurse in the Boston Lying-in Hospital, since [illegible] account of Jane Toppan's [illegible] trial.

JANE TOPPAN.

BLANCHE NELSON.

Famous Poisoner who is starving herself to death in Taunton Insane Hospital, her former nurse, and view of Asylum, with arrow indicating Miss Toppan's quarters.

By Blanche Nelson.

When I first saw Jane Toppan, nearly two years ago, she was [illegible] what I call a big woman. She was [illegible] pounds. At that time I [illegible]

but I often saw her in the ward. She had beautiful big dark-brown eyes, and black hair touched with gray. Her face was kind and she seemed rather motherly. At times she was bitterly sarcastic in talking to the nurses and doctors. She used to tell the nurses that they didn't understand medicine.

Jane Toppan always dressed in a black shirt waist and skirt. She got up at the [illegible] morning, dressed herself and did her hair neatly. She always made her own bed, for she declared the nurses didn't do it properly.

The food at the hospital was plain and she found fault with it, declaring that it was not [illegible] to get well on. Generally we had roast of some kind, and [illegible] for breakfast. She always had either tea or [illegible]. For dinner with potatoes and [illegible] or milk. For supper we had bread [illegible] and sauce. Jane Toppan never ate anything but bread and butter and tea.

She read [illegible] and a great deal, and the Chicago [illegible] sent her [illegible] She never seemed to like to [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] but [illegible] and [illegible] She [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FALL RIVER REJOICING AS Long Idle Mills Open Doors and STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK

FACING WINTER NOW WITHOUT ANY FEAR.

Confident in Justice to Come From Arbitration of the Governor, the Operatives Are Undismayed by Debt

ARE ON GOOD TERMS WITH MILL OWNERS

Much Tact Needed to Avert Friction Which Arises in Readjustment of the Great Industrial Establishments

By Frank K. Foster.

The fun-provoking Mark Tapley, who "comes out strongest" in good nature when surrounded by doleful people, would find little stimulus in the Fall River of to-day. Public feeling is happily optimistic. Storekeepers wear a brighter look. The old folks, chatting at the corner of the tenement house block, pitch their voices in a less querulous strain. Youth, which will not be denied, strike or no strike, already laughs at the thought of the black months just passed and plans for the small festivities of the future. In many a polyglot tongue, a note of relief is sounded, that merciful reaction which comes with the cessation of physical or mental distress.

Not every community would envy the situation of Fall River as it exists to-day. Large numbers of the operatives are heavily in debt. Merchants are staggering under great loads of credit granted to the strikers, while their own is stretched to the uttermost. But very many things are relative in this world, any by comparison with the period when the strike incubus weighed down upon the city, the present seems a time for rejoicing.

The strike just ended has been one of the most remarkable on record in this or any other country. Dr. Watts's little verse about idleness and his Satanic majesty is not verified by the Fall River court record, which during the past six months has shown a steady decrease in the cases brought before it.

Strikers Behaved Well.

Notwithstanding the large number of people affected by the strike, not a single mill was picketed by the textile unions, and not five per cent of the union members returned to work. Although they were not practically free to follow their own judgment in the matter. The few who did return only did so under the spur of absolute necessity. Among the skilled and well organized branches of the industry, such as the weavers and loom fixers, there were also only no defections from the union ranks.

General Secretary Hilbert estimates that over $300,000 have been disbursed since the inception of the strike, of which $200,000 came from the open treasuries and $100,000 from donations from other sources. Many of the local business houses have been making weekly contributions to the strikers. It is worthy of the attention of those who are wont to prate of the selfishness of trade unions that over $50,000 have been paid out by these organizations to outsiders who had no legal claim whatsoever upon the funds.

Gratitude to All Who Aided.

Relative to the contributions and the attitude of the local business public, President John Golden said to the writer:

"I want, through the BOSTON AMERICAN to express our appreciation of what has been done for us. We shall never forget the liberality of our brother trade unionists of New England and of the entire country toward us in our time of need. We have a particularly kindly feeling also toward our local dealers and landlords. Many of them have risked the entire savings of a lifetime upon the honesty of our people, and we intend that they shall not repent of the trust they have reposed in us. We have not a solitary case of eviction for non-payment of rent since the strike began.

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT JOHN GOLDEN, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED TEXTILE WORKERS OF AMERICA, TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

"Operatives told our people, 'don't bother about rent. If the strike goes a year.' The system of corporating tenements does not exist in Fall River, so it does not rest with the mill corporations to rent dwellings to the operatives. It was one of the first things that the only threat of eviction came, and in explanation of this fact it should be stated that this particular corporation was in hard circumstances and has now got on both the hands of a receiver.

"Much talked about the terms of settlement [illegible] as well as several prominent members of the mule spinners, expressed themselves as satisfied that a substantial gain has been made. I believe that the relations between Governor Douglas, Fairweather and business generally, and below these he will render them [illegible] justice in carrying out the

I want, through the BOSTON AMERICAN, to express our appreciation of what has been done for us. FIVE AMERICANS ARE SLAIN IN MEXICO.

Fears Now Felt for the Safety of W. Chapman Potter of a New York Mining Firm, Who Is Travelling in Same Region

Chicago, Jan. 21.—A telegram from Nogales, Ariz., states that the bodies of five Americans who were murdered yesterday in the State of Sonora, Mexico, by Yaqui Indians, were brought to that place to-day. The dead men are said to have lately come from Illinois. This information, together with the news of the murder near Torres, Mexico, of John J. Mackenzie and Dr. Robert Coy, of Chicago, has aroused fears for the safety of W. Chapman Potter, son of E. A. Potter, who is in the same region.

Potter, who is a son in law of Secretary of the Navy Morton, is the junior member of the mining engineering firm of Dickman, Mackenzie & Potter, and has resided in the City of Mexico for a year as superintendent of the mining interests of Guggenheim & Co. of New York, which has fifteen gold mines in Mexico and is one of the largest concerns in America. He is now on a trip to inspect one of the mines near Sonora, in the state of Sinaloa, adjoining Sonora in which Mackenzie and Coy were killed.

He wrote his father a letter on January 8 from Chicago, in which he said he would head into the mountains with a mule train accompanied by two Indian guides. He expected to be gone five days.

He left the railroad at Minaca for the mine, which lies forty miles to the north west and is no more than thirty miles from the point near Torres where Mackenzie and Coy met their deaths.

STATE DEPARTMENT TAKES STEPS FOR SAFETY OF POTTER

Washington, Jan. 21.—The State Department to-day telegraphed United States Ambassador Clarkson, Mexico City, to take steps to send the body of Mr. Mackenzie, who was killed yesterday by Indians, to the United States. Ambassador Clarkson has instructed to take means to ensure the safety of Mr. Potter, a son-in-law of Secretary of the Navy Morton, and a partner of Mackenzie's, who is supposed to be in the bush, about 200 miles from Nogales.

Secretary Morton has also telegraphed the Governor of the Mexican province of Sonora, who is a personal friend of his, to send out a party to rescue Potter.

KILLS HIMSELF IN WIFE'S PRESENCE

New Bedford, Jan. 21.—Thomas Boswell killed himself to-day by cutting his throat in his home at No. 1 Austin court. Boswell, who was employed as a fixer in the Bristol mill, had been melancholy for some time, due to sickness. He was much interested in the Peggy Sullivan fight to come off here Monday.

"Shall I spend $2 to see the fight or cut my throat?" he asked his wife as he prepared to shave.

"Get the $2 first," said his wife, and an instant later saw her husband nearly sever his head from his body.

TAX TRAFFIC BY HEARST BILL.

To Force Purchase of Entire Stock in the Panama Railroad Company.

MEASURE ASSURES FAIR TRANSCONTINENTAL RATES

To Take Two Per Cent. Not Now Held by Condemnation Proceedings.

UNITED STATES THEN TO CONTROL ALL TRAFFIC

Special to the Sunday American.

Washington, Jan. 21. By the introduction of one bill to-day Representative William Randolph Hearst brought to a focus the Panama Railroad situation and the question of transcontinental freight rates.

These despatches have explained that by the acquisition of a majority of the Panama railroad company stock the United States Government has blundered into government ownership of a route from New York to San Francisco by railway and water, via the Isthmus of Panama. It has also been explained that the government by utilizing this route can bring the transcontinental freight rates down to a reasonable level.

Secretary of War Taft is inclined to the belief that the Government should get into ships plying between New York and Cuba on the ground that the Government should not go into the steamship business. Administration friends have also made the point that the Government owns a purse seine ship of the Panama Railroad which under contract with the Pacific Mail gets one tripod a day entire to Colon. New York and San Francisco will control the transcontinental rate situation.

In brief there is a hurried movement on foot to dispose of the steamships owned by the Panama Railroad Company and which the United States in effect owns because of its possession of ninety eight per cent. of stock in that road.

Would Acquire Whole Road.

Mr. Hearst's bill introduced to-day provides for the acquirement of all the capital stock and property of the Panama Railroad Company, forbids the United States Government to dispose of the ships now plying between New York and Colon, stipulates $3 tonnage to buy the stock in question, authorizes further appropriations for the maintenance operations and delegates part of the bill and says:

authorizes and directs the Isthmian Canal Commission to use and put into immediate service the numerous government transports that are now lying in the docks. In other words, Representative Hearst proposes to put into operation in a practical way the government owned water and rail route between New York and San Francisco.

Thus this great question is put squarely before Congress and the Administration Senate leaders, like Messrs. Morgan and Elkins, agree in the proposition that if the Panama Railroad steamship connections are preserved by the President as the Hearst bill requires this government line would necessarily affect the transcontinental railroads and make them fair and reasonable.

Duty to Maintain Railway.

Senator Morgan undoubtedly voiced the general sentiment when he recently said that it was the duty of the Administration to maintain the water end steamship line, because and because of the great saving in freight rates which it would make to relieve the transcontinental rates.

There is of course a tremendous pressure on the Administration to dispose of the steamships but that is not likely to be done before the government owned canal is completed.

The text of Mr. Hearst's bill is as follows:

In the House of Representatives
By Mr. Hearst

A bill

To authorize the acquisition by the United States of the entire capital stock and property of the Panama Railroad Company and to provide the maintenance, operation, sale, and disposition by the Government of the railroad and steamship property and the stock so acquired

Be it enacted by the senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled

That the President of the United States be and is hereby authorized to acquire for and on behalf of the United States a controlling share of capital stock of the Panama Railroad Company not now owned by the United States.

Sec. 2 That should the President be unable to acquire said shares by purchase or by agreement which he is to be reasonable, the President is hereby authorized to acquire the same by condemnation in the judicial process. The United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York shall have jurisdiction of the proceedings for such condemnation upon petition of the President on behalf of the United States against the owners of said shares and it shall be appointed a master, who shall hear the case and report to the court the fair value of said shares. The practice, pleadings and forms of proceedings in cases arising under this section shall conform as nearly as may be to the practice, proceedings and forms in like cases actions existing at the time in the highest court of the State of New York for the condemnation of property for the public use.

Sec. 3—That it shall be the duty of the Attorney General of the United States, upon the request of the President to cause proceedings for condemnation, under the foregoing section, to be instituted promptly, and thereafter to prosecute the same on behalf of the United States.

Last of the Famous "Lionesses" of the day of Louis Philippe Has Passed Away

Paris, Jan. 21. The countess de Beaumont, who has just died, was the last survivor of a coterie of fashionable women who held sway under the reign of Louis Philippe, and were known as "The Lionesses." The "Lionesses" were to the society of that day what the "coquettes" were to the Second Empire, and what the "Little Duchesses" are in our time. They were four in number the Duchesse de Plaisance, the Comtesse de Beaufort, the Comtesse de Rute-James and the Comtesse de Rossi, nee Mlle. Marjolaine de Castellane.

Their style resembled mainly that of affected simplicity. In the evenings, for instance, they always wore the same gown, only that had taken place about a dozen times by the great dressmaker who had fashioned it, so that their toilettes were always fresh and charming. This also afforded a contrast to society, which they replaced by fresh flowers, mainly white and pink camelias, that is to say by the most trying of all flowers to wear. These famous women had to be doubly beautiful to triumph over the ills which they set themselves, it appears that they were most successful.

Their chief attraction, however, consisted in their lively wit and with that quality of sour grape, commonly known as envy to which end.

While the celebrated tragedienne, Sarah Bernhardt, was having recently, at the end occasion to play "L'Aiglon," by Edmond Rostand, at Bordeaux, the entire royal family was present at the performance, and among the parts was the young heir to the Bonaparte throne. Some days after the tragedienne was so carried away by emotion at her own acting, as sometimes occurs to her that his parents had to have him removed from the theatre for fear that his

It is different that there is such a thing as how left in the world. Nevertheless, I believe, there is one many some things, as instance that the [illegible] of fog is to make one much more kind to little boys for who can keep still enough to see the fog coming, is owing to his normally foggy manner thereof. Special Cable to Sunday American.
Rome, Jan. 21.—The greatest interest exists in scientific circles here over the invention of a wireless telephone, which is the result of the labors of Father Emilio de Castelgagno, a Monk connected with the Vatican Observatory. The invention is the result of experiments carried on with the present wireless system of telegraphy, and is declared by professional experts to be of the highest importance. The monastery garden is the scene of the experiments, and the big aerial system of a few yards square of which is four miles long. A series of three poles, about 100 feet high, mounted one upon a little low tower in the garden, is the receiver. Ringing the bell which acts as the receiver for the wireless system, a telephonic message was sent to a distance of about 25 miles over another set of masts, a test being satisfactorily

Special Cable to Sunday American.
London, Jan. 21.—Inquiries are being made by a New Yorker through agents in London about Brook House, Lord Tweedmouth's magnificent mansion in Park Lane, and it is now stated that Whitelaw Reid, Mr. Choate's successor as American Ambassador at the Court of St. James, will lease the house.

Brook House, which has been in the market to be let or sold for some months past, is a comparatively modern house of red brick, fronting it well built and nearly double the size of Mr. Choate's residence in Prebend Gardens.

There are six very large reception rooms at Brook House and a ball room, and there is also a broad gallery at the top of the house.

FRENCH VOTE DOWN OUR GIRL EDUCATION

Paris, Jan. 21.—French mothers have declared their disapproval of the American system of education for girls at a meeting held at the Salle des Agriculteurs.

A spirited debate took place, one side pleading for the modern, up-to-date, scientific education of girls known in France as the "American" method, and the other standing as the advocate of the old-fashioned system of education.

At the close of the debate a ballot was taken, and resulted in the defeat of the advocates of the American ideas of education.

GREATEST AUTO SHOW EVER HELD CLOSES; MANUFACTURERS SOLD OUT

Big Success of the Exhibit in Madison Square Garden, New York.

New York, Jan. 21.—The great auto show, the most successful ever held in this country, closed at Madison Square Garden to-night. So many motor cars have been sold during the show that the American manufacturers have closed their books to any more orders for the year of 1905. Thousands the same people it's value to make and purchases are made.

All the well-known and makes of [illegible] ity and finest ever were shown, and the public, rich and well-to-do, came and purchased until the American maker, with a smile of satisfaction on his face, declared that for the present year no more orders can be taken beyond those already promised.

MR HENRY B [illegible]

Governor Bell, speaking of the letter she wrote him, said:

The letter was wonderful and far beyond anything I had expected of her.

Mrs. Bell, who is a noted scholar, says that Mrs. Rogers was and is right mind, and that the letter received by the governor was hardly the work of an insane person. The letter was so well written, so well worded, that the governor had not suspected she had written it until he had opened the second of the batch of letters that was in the case.

Mrs. Bell said: "Mrs. Rogers has some excellent taste and decorated many of the pretty booklets with birds and flowers.

Who Will Spring the Drop?

The question of the day of execution is related to the question of who will hang Rogers. It is said that Sheriff Peck is in no condition to perform the duty, and it is believed that Deputy Sheriff Hall will perform the task.

While much is being said about Mrs. Rogers, few have had a sight of her. Deputy Sheriff Hall has been in charge of the prisoner since her arrival here, and it is said to be an exemplary and obedient prisoner.

Sinful, but No Fool.

Mrs. Rogers knows full well the charges that have been applied to her and said in reference to the characterization of her nature by some of those who are working in her behalf:

"I know my counsel intimated that I was a degenerate. I am a sinful woman, but I don't like being classed as a fool."

Far From Degenerate

Those who have been most constantly with Mrs. Rogers during her stay in the prison deny the assertion made by those who are trying to save her that she is ignorant or a moral degenerate. She is intelligent and refined, they declare. Her fortitude has astonished them. There is nothing to indicate that she has taken a fatalistic view of the case, and she seems to have no doubt of the fact that death is to be her fate unless the unforeseen saves her.

She was not told that Governor Bell had said he would not reprieve her, but she has secretly cherished the faith that he would interfere before the hour of doom. If this is the case it is feared when she learns what he has said that the awful disclosure will unnerve her and that she will collapse.

It was feared when she was taken to the corridor outside the cell that her nerves did not quarters well. But her nerves did not fail her. She entered it without a tremor and spoke with a calm of apprehension to the rest of those who were around her.

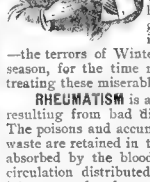
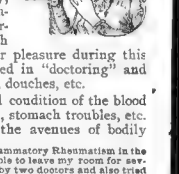
WINTER TERRORS

RHEUMATISM A DEMON OF PAIN

CATARRH DISGUSTING—DANGEROUS





Even when the body is strong and free from disease, the blood pure and healthy and every member working in harmony with nature, the cold, bleak winds of Winter, its ice and snow are disagreeable, and we are glad to see the "Ice King" give place to Spring with its warm, pleasant weather. There are many, however, who must, in addition to the disagreeable, unpleasant weather, bear the suffering and distress of Rheumatism and Catarrh—the terrors of Winter—and they have little bodily comfort or pleasure during this season, for the time not spent in absolute suffering is employed in "doctoring" and treating these miserable diseases, with bandages, hot applications, douches, etc.

RHEUMATISM is a deep seated disease caused by a sour, acid condition of the blood resulting from bad digestion, weak kidneys, poor bowel action, stomach troubles, etc. The poisons and accumulations which should pass off through the avenues of bodily waste are retained in the system, to be absorbed by the blood and through the circulation distributed to the different joints, muscles, bones and nerves of the body, producing the pain of Rheumatism. The muscles contract, the joints inflame and stiffen, pains shoot through the body, and every movement is accompanied with excruciating agony. The first breath of Winter brings on the symptoms, and at every exposure to cold or damp weather there is another attack. Plasters, liniments, oils, etc., do not reach the disease, which is in the blood, and valuable time is lost by experimenting with these, because all the while the poison is accumulating in the blood and the disease getting a stronger hold on the system, that may result in shattered nerves, weak heart or permanently crippled limbs, leaving them physical wrecks.

CATARRH, with all its loathsome and dangerous symptoms, is fanned into life when cold weather comes, and the patient knows he must go through the winter "hawking and spitting," with dull headaches, an annoying, thin, watery discharge from the nostrils, and half sick feeling all the time. In vain he tries washes, sprays and inhalations, with only temporary relief, because the trouble is in the blood and beyond the reach of surface treatment. The blood is filled with waste matter and catarrhal poisons caused by the inactivity of the organs, and if these are not expelled and the blood built up, and made healthy, the disease becomes dangerous and often leads to Consumption.

S. S. S. is a perfect blood purifier and cleanses the blood of all poisons and impurities, and as it circulates through the body it nourishes and soothes the irritated nerves, aching muscles, joints and mucous membrane, and cures Rheumatism and Catarrh permanently; and while it is thorough in its action, it is gentle and never leaves any bad results. S. S. S. builds up every part of the system by its fine tonic effect, increases the appetite, aids the digestion and puts every part in good working condition. S. S. S. is purely vegetable, and does not injure the system in the least. Book containing information about either disease and any advice wished will be given by our physicians without charge.

SSS

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, ATLANTA, GA.

I had a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism in the knees, from which I was unable to leave my room for several months. I was treated by two doctors and also tried different kinds of liniments and medicines which seemed to relieve me from pain for awhile, but at the same time I was not any nearer getting well. One day while reading a paper I saw an advertisement of S. S. S. for Rheumatism. I decided to give it a trial, which I did at once. After I had taken three bottles I felt a great deal better, and I still continued to take it regularly until I was entirely cured. I never feel better than for years, and I cheerfully recommend S. S. S. to any one suffering from Rheumatism. 613 22d St., Newport News, Va. C. E. GILDERSLEEVE.

Gentlemen—I had a bad case of Catarrh, and used the usual treatment of sprays and washes without any benefit. Several doctors told me I could not be cured. I had a continual headache, my cheeks had grown purple, my nose was always stopped up, my breath had a sickening and disgusting odor, and I coughed incessantly. I heard of S. S. S. and wrote to you. On your recommendation I commenced to use it, and after taking several bottles I was convinced I was getting rid of the slightest symptoms of the disease. I will always be glad to recommend it to other sufferers. Respectfully,

WOMEN'S INDUSTRIAL UNION DISPLAY FINEST RESULTS IN THE ART OF COOKING PROPERLY

CHILDREN WIN SOME OF THE BEST PRIZES.

Novel and Interesting Experiments Along Culinary Lines, and Exhibit Showing Advance In the Domestic Sciences

That we are what our cooks make us, and that bad cooks make more drunkards than bartenders do, is one of the bolloth inspiring novel and interesting experiments by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, at No. 264 Boylston street.

The food exhibit and fair held under the auspices of the union, and brought to a successful close last evening, was the first exhibition of the kind ever attempted in Boston. Co-operating with the union in the exhibit and competing for the prizes were domestic science schools and classes, cooks of the Domestic Reform League, cooking clubs, public school classes and other organizations aiming to stimulate an interest in higher standards for the quality and preparation of food.

Chefs Are Barred.

Chefs were rigidly barred from this exhibit, it being strictly a women's affair, but among the competitors were children from the various settlement houses, and four boys from the Hale House in the South End won several prizes. An invalid's lunch prepared by these boys attracted much attention.

The girls from the Winthrop School carried off more prizes than any other cooking class from the public schools.

Members of the Domestic Reform League also won a large number of prizes.

The Colonial Tea Room was the prettiest feature of the fair.

The following young women of Greater Boston, gowned in Colonial costumes, served: Misses Laura Barker, Clitherel Dean, Natalie Eldridge, Florence Sanborn, Martha Bell and May Davis, and Mrs. Robert K. Eaton and Mrs. Webster G. Hayward. Mrs. Chester Hart presided at the piano.

Serving of Hot Dinners.

The union has devised a method of sending hot dinners into the homes of Boston and its suburbs. The evolution of the heat retainer was an interesting feature of the exhibit, and showed how the mechanical difficulties of sending out appetizing dinners and keeping them hot are being met through the union's equipment.

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union is a woman's club, with a steadily increasing membership, now nearly 3,000. It aims to help women to help themselves and to develop broad social sympathies. The food, employment and handicraft departments handled last year business amounting to $150,000.

IMPORTANT TRANSFERS MADE IN BACK BAY

Hotel Agassiz, Commonwealth Avenue, Taxed at $290,000, Among the Sales, Charles F. Adams, 2d, the Purchaser

All points of the compass, with Boston as the centre, seemed to have taken part in the real estate transactions of the past week, which agents in different locations say has never before been equalled for that time of the year known as "mid-Winter;" when things are generally lacked upon as being at a standstill. Pleasant weather is given as the reason for the brisk market that has prevailed, with the record transfers in the Back Bay, the district north of Boston and the West End, with the suburban districts doing remarkably well, from the agents' points of view. A prominent real estate dealer said yesterday: "The past week will go down in history as a record in real estate sales, and should the good weather prevail for the remainder of the month January, 1905, will be the banner mid-Winter month for more than a decade."

Bay State Road Sale.

In Boston one of the principal transactions of the week was the sale of the property numbered 167 Bay State road on the water side, the deal being closed through the office of Allen & Rogers, of Congress street. The property was conveyed to Catherine E. W. Clark and another for account of George Wheatland, and is a four-story structure of light stone and brick standing on 2,553 feet of land. The taxation value of the estate is $27,800, of which $12,000 is on the land.

Papers have also been signed for the deed, in Dorchester, of No. 27 Bicknell street, of the eight buildings and 5,230 feet of land belonging to the Francis R. Wister heirs, bounded by Myrtle, Anderson and Revere streets in the West End. The valuation of the whole property is $20,900, with $17,500 on the land. The frontage on the three streets covers over 400 feet, and next month the buildings will be torn down to give place to four five-story brick apartment houses, containing nine suites each.

Trade Brisk Outside.

The district north of Boston has also done well for the week. Edward T. Hartnett & Co. have just sold one of the most prominent properties in Lexington—the Bryant estate, situated on Massachusetts avenue, at the junction of the State road, where it has a frontage of 800 feet. The sale includes a large farm house, stable and conservatories, with 160,000 feet of land, and is the first sale of the property for over half a century. The name of the purchaser has not been made public as yet, but the title was given by Bryant of Chicago, and $12,000 was the asking price of the property.

The same firm has sold the Elliot estate, consisting of land and farm buildings, in Stoneham, the purchaser being R. and A. J. Mosher, of Westport, the whole property being valued at $5,000.

The property numbered 28 and 30 Josephine avenue, Roxbury, owned by the Westboro Savings Bank was also conveyed by the bank to Charles H. Gould of Cambridge. There are two frame apartment houses in the estate, the whole being assessed at $8,000.

Dorchester Lands Sold.

In Dorchester several lots of vacant land changed hands through Messrs. Herring-Hall-Marvin Co. including three lots owned by Edwin R. DeLong, and sold to Leander E. H. Jones, who will improve in the Spring. The lots are situated on Lyon and Bleich streets and the price paid is private.

The property known as the Hotel Agassiz, numbered 190 Commonwealth avenue, also changed hands during the week. The structure is of brick and stone, six stories in height, with 7,000 feet of land, taxed for $290,000. The property was owned by Henry H. Higginson et al, and is bought by Charles F. Adams, 2nd, et al. It is also said that papers are being prepared for the sale of another fine hotel property in the district.

N. W. Houghton of Hopkinton has sold his estate on Cedar hill, Framingham to Commonwealth avenue, that town, to Charles E. Stone, of Newton, with P. F. Leland as the broker. The same dealer also sold for the Melrose Savings Bank the two-family house at No. 194 Mt. Vernon street, Malden, to C. C. Bonnette, the famous aerial artist, who buys for a home.

Sout: End Business.

The estate at No. 49 Piedmont street, in the South End, has also been sold by Thomas W. Grechall to Annie L. Barrett, on private terms. It includes a brick house and $25 feet of land, all taxed for $4,300

In Chester, W. J. Paul sold for Louis J. and Charles E. Walters the three family dwelling at No. 151 Hancock street, to Annie F. Murphy. The estate is assessed for $4,500.

Through McCorry & Burns, David Gilchrist has purchased the Richardson farm at Hillsboro, N. H., containing 100 acres of land, at a private figure. There is a large two-story house and two stock barns on the place, and the purchaser is already in possession.

Through the same parties, Mary F. Phillips has sold her six-acre homestead on Winter street, Mansfield, to a Lynn business man, whose name will be made public later.

J. Reeves has sold the estates at Nos. 19 and 19A Kentland street, Dorchester, consisting of a swell front brick house and 2,225 feet of land, assessed for $7,100, to a party whose name will be given when the deed passes.

MAKES DRUNKARDS; CANNOT COMPLAIN

Kansas City, Jan. 21.—"When a man is engaged in the business of making drunkards he doesn't do so in time to complain if the effects of that business come to him."

With the foregoing words, Circuit Judge Park closed his refusal to grant Cornelius Daily a divorce. Daily is a saloonkeeper. His wife is in the State asylum for the insane in Mt. Joseph. The excessive use of whiskey furnished by her husband, it is alleged, caused Mrs. Daily to lose her mind.

SALEM GOLDEN WEDDING.

Beverly, Jan. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. James Monroe celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage to-day. They were married in Salem January 21, 1855, by Rev. Sumner Ellis, pastor of the Universalist Church.

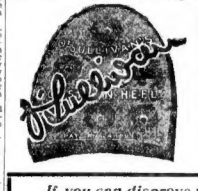
LET US HELP YOU CARRY YOUR LOAD

Here Is a Presentation of Facts More Startling Than Frenzied Finance

ONE THAT INTERESTS THE WHOLE PEOPLE

Do you know how much one lifts per day in the process of walking? One of our most eminent scientists recently stated that the average man, weighing 150 lbs., lifts at each step 25 foot pounds, each step being about two inches.

Figuring this down to a practical basis, and assuming that a man actually lifts 150 lbs. every time he steps, and that the average man walks no less than three miles per day, including walking about the house, up and down stairs, etc., the average man actually lifts 1,188,000 pounds per day.



It can readily be seen that with this immense amount of weight the Rubber Heel is more of an essential than is generally supposed, and it is hardly conceivable that any should deny themselves the benefit when the cost of procuring them is so lovely nominal. But be sure and get O'Sullivan's—they're the best and the only heels made of New Live Rubber as it comes from the banks of the Amazon—Price 50c. attached—All dealers—Imitations cost the same, but as they leave the dealer a bit more profit, you may have them to order by the name O'Sullivan and insist.

Rubber Soles And the Heels the Year Round

People who value their health, who want to avoid damp feet, will follow the physicians' advice, should have the soles of their shoes covered with rubber from November to May every year. It's the demand of New England climate.

You may evade it for awhile successfully, but in the end you'll get caught with a cold—and then what? Heed the advice, go buttling men and thinking women, but when you decide to get soles, get O'Sullivan's, because they are new rubber, they're light, don't weigh half as much as old-fashioned soling, and will wear from November to May. Soles 75c., heels 35c., unattached; dealers or makers.

MICHAEL RUSSELL, OF WORCESTER, DEAD

Worcester, Jan. 21.—Michael L. Russell, one of the best-known Democratic politicians of Worcester, died at St. Aloysius's Hospital from cancer of the stomach. Mr. Russell was forty-four years old and was a native of Chicago, but had lived in Worcester since infancy.

Mr. Russell became famous in Worcester in 1894, when he defeated Representative James H. Mellen for a seat in the House of Representatives by fourteen votes. He was the first man to break Mr. Mellen's long term in the Legislature.

CADETS LOSE AT HOCKEY.

Special to the Boston American.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 21.—In a fast game of hockey here to-day the St. Paul seven defeated the Cadets by a score of 2 to 1. The visitors carried the puck and shot so well that a number of goals must have been made had Goal Keeper Sumner and Point Torney been less alert.

CHADWICK LACE AND JEWELRY SEIZED

Cleveland, Jan. 21.—The Federal authorities to-day admitted that the Chadwick mansion on Euclid avenue was raided last Wednesday by United States Government officials of the customs department, and quantities of foreign lace and ivory found, which, it is alleged, were brought into this country by Mrs. Chadwick, who "negleted" to pay the duty thereon.

The property found is of the estimated value of $100,000, and was bought by Mrs. Chadwick in Paris, Brussels, London, Vienna and Venice.

DR. EASTMAN GETS ONE YEAR IN JAIL

Saco, Me., Jan. 21.—Dr. Charles A. Eastman, of Old Orchard, indicted for manslaughter, in having caused the death of Miss Edith S. Mehaffey, of Roxbury, Harbor, the young woman dying at his sanitarium April 11, 1904, was sentenced to-day to one year in Alfred jail.

FITZHUGH LEE'S DAUGHTER TO WED

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 21.—Miss Annie Fitzhugh Lee, a daughter of Major General Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A., retired, is to wed Lieutenant Lewis Brown, U. S. A., of the Seventh Cavalry. The wedding will take place on February 15 at St. Paul's Episcopal church, this city. Lieutenant Brown is from Rhode Island.

STRIKE PERIL OFF IN PENNSYLVANIA

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.—All danger of a strike of the Pennsylvania trainmen was averted late to-day, when both parties to the controversy issued a statement to the effect that an amicable adjustment had been reached.

SLOT MACHINE RAID IN LYNN; 2 ARRESTS

Lynn, Jan. 21.—Agent Thomas Davis, of the Boston Watch and Ward Society, visited this city to-day and began a mild crusade against slot machines, causing the arrest of two tobacco merchants.

Warrants were sworn out by Agent Davis against Thomas F. Egan and William Tabor, Union street cigar store proprietors, charging them with being present where gaming instruments were found. The Watch and Ward Society agent claimed that he found a nickel-in-the-slot card machine at Egan's place, and a dice machine at the Tabor store.

INSTANTLY KILLED IN WATCH FACTORY

Ernest A. Benson, an employe of the electrical department of the American Waltham Watch Company, at Waltham, was instantly killed yesterday by being caught in a belt and thrown against an iron pulley five feet in diameter.

terms of the agreement, in which he is to act as arbitrator.

How Advance Will Come.

For a clear understanding of the basis upon which the operatives look for a wage advance, some detailed explanation is necessary for those not familiar with the mechanical terms involved. The mill owners claim that a "margin" of seventy-five cents is requisite in order that they may be a profitable business. The margin is meant the difference in value between the cost of the raw cotton and the selling price of the finished product. For instance, supposing that the ruling cost of staple cotton—Middling Uplands being used as a standard—were 6 cents a pound. Eight pounds will make forty-five yards of cloth. If cloth sells at three cents a yard, then the raw material in the forty-five yards of cloth would sells for $1.35, costs fifty-six cents, which subtracted from $1.35 leaves a margin of seventy-nine cents to cover depreciation, labor, insurance, etc.

On this basis, the operatives, under the terms of the agreement, would be entitled to a dollar per cent, which is more or less as the prices rule for raw cotton and finished product. The margin of seventy-five cents, alleged by the mill owners as necessary in order that they may get a six per cent. dividend, is disputed by the operatives, who say that in the past the employers have repeatedly acknowledged that a seventy cent margin would do this, but they have conceded the seventy-five cent margin until April 1, when it is believed that new agreements basis for regulating may be agreed upon.

It is only fair to say that present market conditions are not favorable to an advance in the wage scale, but these conditions are abnormal and are expected to improve during the coming months.

Loom Question a Factor.

Another point, which was one of the sources of the original dissatisfaction among the operatives, especially affecting the weavers, and which the terms of the settlement agrees "to make satisfactory," is the loom question. Some of the up-to-date corporations have introduced long bobbins and stop motions on their looms, making the work of the operative easier and while requiring the weaver to run more machines, yet so adjusted wages as to make the conditions satisfactory. Other mills, however, without these labor-saving devices, are having them only in part—as for instance long bobbins without stop motion—have tried to impose extra labor with no added recompense.

This is a matter the mill owners' representatives guaranteed to satisfactorily adjust, and there will undoubtedly be more or less friction before the matter is finally settled. It is another case of many which the operatives say exist where corporations with antiquated machinery seek to impose upon the work people the handicap which results from the corporation's own lack of energy.

As at the conclusion of most strikes, more or less confusion exists in putting the old hands back at work. Those familiar with the internal economy of all large industrial establishments know that the stop mechanism of a loom, the shuttle, the thread shuttle and rivalries, little coolish misunderstandings among subordinates and sub-foremen, and all the petty tyrants which incubate among men dressed in a little brief authority. Men of the kind take advantage of the occasion to "feed fat the ancient grudges" they bear to some among those who seek re-employment, and thus bitterness is engendered and a sense of injustice is aroused among those who are discriminated against in the rearrangement of the chaos which the strike brought about in many departments. All the tact of the union officials will be needed to smooth these matters over as well as the re-operation of the really responsible administrators of the factories.

The sinister tenders claim that they are especially discriminated against, quite a large percentage of their members having been refused employment in the factory and for their old places. The Textile Council has been asked to take up these cases.

Citizens' Alliance to Blame.

Now that the strike is ended, it is no breach of confidence to say that there is absolute evidence that the influence of the Citizens' Alliance, which has for its open and avowed purpose the breaking up of the trade union movement, was instrumental in prolonging the contest. It is fortunate for the community that even the members of the Alliance among the mill owners are not naturally in accord with the policy of that obstreperous and orgillous organization.

The bulk of the operatives and the citizens of Fall River as a whole may never know the kind of danger which threatened the community if the action of the professional agents of the Alliance had been taken by the mill owners, for a policy was recommended which would have rallied around a wholesale revolt throughout the entire State of Massachusetts, and which would have fastened upon the mill owners themselves an oligopy which would have overshadowed that which clings around the memory of the unlamented Sampson of North Adams.

But, to the credit of the good sense and sound judgment of the leading mill owners, it was a case of "get behind me, Satan," and the catastrophe was happily averted.

Meet Owners on Good Terms.

"It is a great source of satisfaction," remarked President Golden, "that we are able after this long strike to meet the mill owners again on good terms. We have done nothing we are ashamed of, the battle has been fairly fought on both sides, and there is no 'come back' in the way of recrimination on the part of either. We recognize the limitations of the business, and we do not intend to be unreasonable in our demands.

"We are also proud that we have brought our organization through all intact, in fact stronger in all that makes true trade unionism to-day than ever before. I am satisfied that the strike will result in the thorough organization of the textile operatives here, for the thousands of non-unionists who have remained steadfast will no see the error of their ways in hitherto neglecting to prepare for war in the time of peace, and they may be caught napping in the same way again."

Secretary Donnelly is also stated that several of the unions paid full benefits to their members all the time the strike lasted. The mule spinners, for illustration, not only paid $5 per week benefit to every member, but a small sum additional weekly for each child in a member's family. These unions, which have a system of high dues, will go immediately at work to build up their treasuries again, with renewed confidence in the policy of substantial benefits and weekly contributions to the union fund sufficiently large to make the organization a business institution.

Room For All Strikers.

It is believed by the secretaries that the situation will soon adjust itself as to the strikers all getting back to work. There are, it is conservatively estimated, 5,000 skilled operatives who have left the city since the strike began. Some of these have obtained employment in other textile centres throughout the country, some are in Canada and quite a number have taken advantage of the strike to visit their homes in the old country. While a certain percentage of the exiles will probably remain where at present located, yet by far the larger portion will return to Fall River. It is said that even should they do so, there is a shortage of skilled help in many of the departments and that employment can be given to all who choose to return.

The collectors, men and women who have been sent out to various sections to solicit funds, are returning daily. They all report the most widespread sympathy with the cause they represented, and most of them received liberal donations. Without exception, however, they are glad to be to turn home, and say: "After all, there is no place like Old New England." Treasurer Dodd Golden's daughter, who was one of the collectors, declared the Mississippi, especially emphatic in her expression of this view.

Privation Among Operatives.

There is yet much privation among the Fall River operatives, and will be for some time to come. The "margin" of the average factory workman covers neither "depreciation" nor other contingencies. It will be a gracious act if those organizations which have levied a weekly assessment upon their membership should continue the payment of the same for at least a month or so longer. The money is needed and will be cheerfully paid.

Years ago the writer visited the scene of the famous fought battle of Bunker Hill. The kindly touch of the passing years had clothed the sides of the hill, where men wrought by steel and shell, yet here and there a shattered tree marked the place of the hurtling messengers of death, and grass and wayside bush where men had sought shelter from leaden storm. Hung up for long time, Bunker Hill's loneliness indicated the last resting place of thousands of the valiant dead. Here, now and then, sleeping there together in the colorless land of death. Among the marble tablets that mark the spot which will be forever sacrilled a verse of Rodman's, giving the famous reply of Kearney's when asked by a subordinate as to where he should go: "Anywhere, these diggings are good for fighting along the whole line."

So, if Kearney's dream should ever come true, and the industrial battlefield of to-day also be commemorated by tablet and statue, on the shores of Narragansett Bay let it be recorded: "Here men bravely strove for fair means of life—and there was glorious victory for the whole line."

FRANK K. FOSTER.

OPERATIVES READY AND EAGER TO WORK

Special to the Sunday American.

Fall River, Jan. 21.—Mill operatives are now as eager to get back to work as they were firm in staying on strike, and there was much chafing when they found that places in the strike could not be found for all immediately. But the friction threatened became less imminent when the manufacturers authorized the statement that they believed that all hands could be employed by Wednesday next. Now it is believed that all will run smoothly for awhile.

Mill hands were not surprised when the Iron Works mills, six in number, which have been running during the strike and paying the old scale, posted the notice that they would go back to work on the 12½ per cent. basis of the hands of the others. The Iron Works mills have become as "Holy City," because they have always been the last to close down and the first to open them. They are owned by M. C. D. Borden of New York. It was understood by mill operatives if they went back to work at the cut scale, Mr. Borden would readjust wages on the same basis.

Now the men, women and children who stayed on strike for six months, and displayed fortitude in the face of hardship which astonished the world, are looking eagerly to Governor Douglas, for whom they have nothing but words of gratitude,
